Nominations sought for Earth awards

The Kentucky Environmental Quality Commission is currently accepting nominations for its annual Earth Day Awards.

Each year the commission recognizes individual, business, government, organization, school and other efforts for outstanding commitment, service, and dedication to protecting Kentucky's environment.

To nominate a person or group, send their name, address, phone number, and a one-page summary describing the nominee's efforts by March 16, to the Environmental Quality Commission, 14 Reilly Rd., Frankfort, KY., 40601.

The name and phone number of the person making the nomination should also be included. EQC will celebrate the 28th Anniversary of Earth Day on April 22 in Frankfort.

Q. I've heard people call some hooked rugs "Frost rugs." What are they?

A. Edward Sands Frost of Biddeford, Maine, is credited with being the first person to mass-produce designs for hooked rugs. Frost, a tin peddler, made his first designs in 1868. They became popular and he devised a method of stenciling the designs in color on burlap.

When he retired in 1876, he sold the stencils to James A. Sirout, then mayor of Biddeford. Sirout continued the business as E.S. Frost & Co. until 1900. By 1902, interest in the designs dwindled.

The Newbury Yarn Co. offered a line of the patterns in 1910. They were made from the original stencils. In the mid-'30s, the entire line was published and sold in stores.

Q. In the 1960s, my mother filled a bowl in the living room with plastic grapes. I was going to throw them away, but someone said they're valuable. Is that true?

A. Plastic fruits and vegetables are popular with collectors. Bunches of grapes sell for $10 to $35, depending on the color. Orange soft-plastic grapes sell for $10. Gold pearlized resin grapes are the most expensive.

Q. As a child, I played with building blocks called "Richter blocks." I think they were made of chalk. Do you remember them?

A. Richter blocks were made in Germany in the early 1930s. They were invented by the Lilienthal brothers. The blocks came in many shapes, including those necessary to create Greek temple columns.

The blocks were made of compressed and dyed sand and chalk, with a linseed-oil varnish. They were sold in a box decorated with a female figure that represented architecture.

The blocks are popular with collectors. There is even a club in Germany that distributes a monthly newsletter.
