Small business tax deduction checklist
Managing your business for profitability involves effectively using your tax. The following checklist of 27 items can help you maximize your tax deductions. It includes information on how to take full advantage of the tax benefits available to small business owners.

Higher deductions for health insurance premiums
Under the new tax law, you as self-employed and paid your own health care insurance in 1997, you may deduct from gross income 40 percent of health insurance cost you paid for you and your family. The deductible portion rises to 45 percent for 1998 and 1999.

Boost retirement savings and gain deductions
As an employer, take advantage of IRAs. If you are a sole proprietor, you may deduct up to $2,000 for 1997. However, keep in mind that the deduction for 1997 year earned income derived from the insurance plan was established.
