First National Bank of Carlisle has promoted Susan Fryman as assistant cashier. Fryman has served the bank 14 years as a customer service representative.

A Nicholas County woman was injured in a altercation Saturday night, according to Trooper David Combs of the Kentucky State Police. Effie Oney Tackett was injured when she became involved in a fight with another woman. According to Combs, Tackett was involved in an argument with Leona G. Besselman, 39, of Jeffersonville, Ky. Combs said Besselman accused Tackett of taking her purse from Barlow's Carryout in Moorefield.

The Eddison caboose at Lake Carnico will soon become a downtown attraction thanks to the generosity of the Eddisons and the Nicholas County Historical Society and Tourism Inc. The Eddison's donated the caboose to the historical society. Historical Society Co-Chairperson Joan Conley said the organization will pay a Lexington contractor to move the caboose to downtown behind the Old Jail (located on Main Street). Several ideas have been discussed for the use of the caboose, such as making it a museum or a bed and breakfast. The red caboose is of historical value, Conley said. TTI Railroad is donating railway ties for the project.

Clemons graduates from Army Reserve Officer Training Corps Advanced Camp

Chadwick Clemons has graduated from the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) Advanced Camp at Fort Lewis, Tacoma, Wash.

At the camp, cadets between their third and fourth year of college completed a five-week course of intensive military leadership training and evaluation exercises in communications, management, and survival training.

After successfully completing advanced camp and graduating from college, the cadet will be commissioned as a second lieutenant to serve in the U.S. Army, National Guard, or Reserve.

The cadet is currently a student at Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, Ky.

Clemons is the son of Chester A. and Dorothy C. Clemons of 41 Public Place, Sharpsburg, Ky.

He is a 1994 graduate of Bath County High School, Owingsville, Ky.

Navy Seaman McGuffin stationed in Albania

Navy Seaman Gabriel S. McGuffin, son of David A. and Juanita M. McGuffin of Cynthia, Ky., is currently halfway through a six-month deployment aboard the amphibious assault ship and Amphibious Ready Group (ARG) flagship USS Kearsarge, home ported in Norfolk, Va.

McGuffin is currently operating in the Aegean Sea supporting Operation Joint Guardian where McGuffin and fellow crewmembers are engaging in humanitarian operations, improving roads and supporting refugee camps in Albania.

In addition, Marines from the 26th MEU recently conducted an amphibious landing off the USS Kearsarge, into Liuhoro, Greece, to deliver the first of American troops in support of a NATO/U.N. peacekeeping force in Kosovo.

McGuffin's ship also made a port visit to Brindisi, Italy, where McGuffin and his fellow shipmates were able to relax, sightsee, shop and tour Rome and Naples, Italy.

Ships like USS Kearsarge are deployed around the world to maintain a U.S. presence and provide a rapid response in times of crisis. Sailors and Marines like McGuffin are often the first to arrive in situations ranging from humanitarian relief efforts to combat operations.

The 1998 graduate of Harrison County High School joined the Navy in August 1998.

Nicholas County Extension's 'Go Wild at Day Camp'

The 1999 3rd Annual Nicholas County Extension 4-H/EFNEP 'Go Wild at Day Camp' was held Wednesday, June 23rd, and Wednesday, June 30th.

Each day started with breakfast, provided by the Summer Lunch Program. After breakfast the campers traveled to Paris for a hands-on activity with Valerie Tipton, a Conservation Technician, on the importance. Then back on the bus and on to Frankfort's Salato Wildlife Education Center where the kids toured the center and learned about the history of the state's wildlife. Some of the things they learned about were: bison, deer, turkey, snakes, fish, bald eagles, turtles, and many other animals. A picnic lunch was provided before they boarded the bus to return.

The day was topped off with the kids making homemade ice cream in a bag; in which everyone went home with a sack full of goodies.

Over 95 children in grades 1-6 from Nicholas County participated in the camp over the two days. This year's day camp was made possible by Mark Mattox, The County Homemaker Association, The County 4-H Council, The Board of Education, and Gerald Hammons.

A special thanks is extended to Bill Fryman for driving the bus, the ladies at the Nicholas County Elementary cafeteria for preparing breakfast and lunch, two adult volunteers, and six of the best teen leaders anywhere.

"Which would you rather drink?" was asked to Megan Howard, Whitney Markland, and Nicole Watkins during a soil lesson during the first day of Day Camp.

Northeastern Kentuckians win big with the Kentucky Lottery

Players in the Kentucky Lottery's Northeastern Sales Region won over $22 million in prizes during Fiscal Year 1999, which ended June 30.

That's part of the $341 million in prizes paid to players statewide during FY '99, since tickets went on sale in April of 1989, Kentucky Lottery players have claimed over $2.7 billion in prizes.

The Kentucky Lottery Corporation also earned $162 million for the State Treasury, 27.7 percent of sales, in FY '99. That's up four percent from the previous record set last year. It's the highest percentage returned to the Commonwealth since the first full year of operation is Fiscal Year 1990.

Most of the money earned by the Lottery for the state in FY '99 went to Kentucky's General Fund, while $5.8 million went to the Affordable Housing Trust Fund. $14 million of the General Fund dividend transfer was earmarked by the legislature for need-based college grants. This year's dividend payment brings the total amount the Kentucky Lottery has paid to the Commonwealth to over $1.2 billion.

The establishment of the Kentucky Lottery was approved by voters and legislators in 1988. Of the over $1.2 billion generated for the Commonwealth since it started, $214 million was designated as a one time bonus for Kentucky Vietnam veterans. The remainder, with the exception of this year's Affordable Housing Trust Fund transfer, has gone to Kentucky's General Fund to pay for programs and projects beneficial to all Kentuckians, such as the $14 million earmarked for college grants.

While players have been winning and the Commonwealth has been enjoying dividends, Kentucky Lottery retailers have been selling tickets and earning millions of dollars. Retailers received over $34 million in Fiscal Year 1999. Ten years of commissions and bonuses have added up to $287 million earned by retailers.

The following list shows the 20 counties in the Kentucky Lottery Corporation's Northeastern Sales Region and the estimated amount won by players in each county during Fiscal Year 1999.

Bath County, $775,458; Boyd County, $4,605,633; Carter County, $1,381,839; Elliott County, $108,059; Fleming County, $589,451; Greenup County, $3,700,545; Johnson County, $1,371,545; Lawrence County, $642,627; Lewis County, $456,985; Magoffin County, $512,395; Martin County, $737,680; Mason County, $1,871,980; Menifee County, $159,717; Montgomery County, $1,993,969; Morgan County, $380,009; Nicholas County, $413,594; Powell County, $779,237; Robertson County, $107,372; Rowan County, $1,444,786; and Wolfe County, $482,453.

KCHIP working with schools to provide health coverage

Kentucky is already taking many of the steps that the Clinton Administration is urging states to carry out to help children enroll in a health insurance program.

During an address this week to the National Governor's Association, President Clinton asked governors to use schools to help children enroll in the insurance program and made several suggestions. The Kentucky Children's Health Insurance Program, located in the Cabinet for Health Services, has taken these steps to work with schools:

• Using free and reduced lunch applications to identify eligible children. In Kentucky, there is a section on the form the state gives to local school districts asking if the family is interested in health insurance. These names are to be forwarded to health departments and the family will be sent an application.

• Local health departments and Family Resource and Youth Services Centers are distributing information and applications for KCHIP at back-to-school fairs and gatherings.

• School personnel - superintendents, principals and counselors, along with professional education associations - have been sent information about KCHIP.

• Flyers telling about the KCHIP program are to be sent to every public school in the state for distribution to students and their families.

In addition to these steps, the KCHIP program allows families to fill out a simple, 2-page application and mail it in; no face-to-face interview is required.

"Kentucky is committed to an aggressive outreach effort for KCHIP," Gov. Paul Patton said. "I would encourage families to take advantage of this program so we can have our children covered by health insurance."

The cabinet had also decided to implement "presumptive eligibility" for KCHIP - another suggestion President Clinton made in his address. Presumptive eligibility means that a provider can treat a child who appears to be eligible for the program, but who has not yet been approved. This allows the child to get medical services he or she needs (for up to 60 days) and allows the provider to be paid for the services regardless of the ultimate decision on the child's eligibility.

KCHIP offers free health insurance coverage to children birth through age 18 who live in families with incomes under 150 percent of the federal poverty line. For a family of four that would be $25,050 a year. An estimated 100,000 uninsured Kentucky children are eligible for health coverage through KCHIP or Medicaid. The cabinet began an extensive outreach campaign in June and is seeking the assistance of schools to help spread the word with the start of classes this month.

The Cabinet for Health Services has also established a toll-free number for families to call with questions about KCHIP and to get an application. The number is 1-877-KCHIP-18 (524-4718). For the hearing impaired, call 1-877-524-4719.

Three Nicholas Countians receive master of arts degrees

Jeryl Gozy, Sara Melissa Spencer Case, and Rodney L. Brookshire, residents of Carlisle, Ky., received a master of arts degrees in education at Georgetown College's commencement ceremony Aug. 7.

Gozy, who teaches at Bourbon County Middle School, Case, who teaches at Nicholas County Elementary School, and Brookshire, who teaches at Grant County Middle School, were among the 98 graduates honored. Dr. James L. Applegate, senior fellow with the Council on Postsecondary Education and a 1971 Georgetown College graduate, was the keynote speaker.

Applegate has been in his present position since May. The Council is a lay board appointed by the Governor to coordinate change and improvement within Kentucky's public system of 36 colleges and universities. The Council also works closely with the state's private colleges and universities in recognition of their contribution to advanced education.

In addition, Applegate has served on the University of Kentucky faculty since 1997 both as professor and chair of the communications department. He has also held leadership positions in number of professional organizations. he is president-elect of the National Communication Association, the largest association of communication scholars in the world.

Applegate earned a master's degree and doctorate from the University of Illinois and is a native of West Point, Ky.

The master of arts in education degree program, reinstituted at Georgetown College in 1957, is designed to provide continuing education for practicing elementary, middle and high school teachers.
