Reading Adventures

(NAPS)—Books and television are two media that bring the whole wide world from the comfort of home—and a new publishing partnership will combine the two media in a way that will let readers share the adventure.

Discovery Communications, Inc. and Random House, Inc., have joined together to establish a new publishing imprint, Discovery Channel Books.

The partnership will produce non-fiction books about nature, science, technology, adventure, exploration and the world around it. The books will be characterized by high production values, skillful storytelling and original content.

The first title to be released under the imprint will be Cleopatra's Palace, published in conjunction with the upcoming Discovery Channel program, which documents the discovery and exploration of the underwater remains of Cleopatra's sunken palace by famed underwater archaeologist Franck Goddio.

Information about Discovery Channel Books can be found by calling 301-986-0444.

NCHS senior wins DAR essay contest

Nicholas County High School senior Melissa Selvage was chosen as the school's representative to the annual Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR) essay contest.

She was asked to ride in the Bourbon County Christmas parade as the honored regional representative for DAR.

She also read her essay along with other regional finalists at the annual meeting of the regional DAR, held at Duncan Tavern in Paris on Saturday, Dec. 5.

MSU, EKU in competition for blood drive on Jan. 12 and 13

Morehead State University will challenge Eastern Kentucky University in the second annual "Battle for Life" blood drive competition on Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 12 and 13.

The Central Kentucky Blood center will conduct the drive in MSU's button Drill Room from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. both days.

Members of the community are invited to join the University family in making a donation.

The drive is a battle between faculty, staff and students at MSU and EKU to see which one can recruit the most donors, said Randall Combs, MSU student chairperson.

Last year's drive was won by EKU by only seven points. "Revenge would be sweet," Combs said. "I can feel good seeing very competitive about this drive because the ultimate winners are the patients at St. Claire Medical Center here and Patti A. Clay Hospital in Richmond.

Non-university donors will count as a double bonus as the totals will be bagged on the number of full-time students at each school.

Competitions also will be staged between Greeks, student organizations and residence halls.

The blood accumulated at this drive will be used to help Eastern and Central Kentucky hospitals fulfill blood supply needs during the holiday season.

Last year the two schools together netted 515 pints of blood.

Anyone wishing to donate must bring some form of identification that includes Social Security number or birthdate.

All donors will receive a special "Battle for Life" T-shirt.

There also will be a drawing for a basketball signed by MSU basketball coach Kyle Macy.

MSU will battle EKU on the basketball court on Saturday, Jan. 16, when the Eagles travel to Richmond for a game that begins at 4:15 p.m.

Additional information on the drive is available from Combs at (606) 783-3580 or the CKBC at 800-775-2522.

Head of the Holler

The world's ugliest leg lacerations, self-inflicted bullets, two rounds of antibiotics, a gallon or so of hydrogen peroxide, and more than three months of aggravation.

So far.

Don't ever attempt to kick off a steel trailer hitch with your shinbone.

It won't work, and there's not much there to see together. If you also are, like me and about 25 percent of the general population, allergic to the best-selling antibiotic salve, twice -daily use of the not-to-be-named medication will promptly set the healing process back several weeks.

And create lots of ugly reddened yellow drainage.

The new scar, should it ever heal back into just a scar and not a big lump, will be the ugliest of an impressively distasteful collection.

The skinny shinbone already bears the aftermath of a flat bacer can propelled by a slashing mower blade (not even one of my own empties, either); the blackish results of slipping down into a sewer line while swinging a muddy mattock, and a scattering of assorted pockmarks from flying rocks, nails, baseball cleats, briars, and other ballistic bashers.

The left leg is less ravaged, but it's the one with the twice-smashed ankle and the scars from cartilage removal.

From the knees down, I wouldn't skin out in two square inches of good clean usable pelt.

The latest wound, though, resisted healing with a stubborn, dogged determination, and for the record — yes, we did have blood tests run for "sugar." It has not helped that the would was/is located where it gets banged repeatedly against doors, desks and woodpiles, where the cornbound can attack and add claw marks to the unhealine factor.

Dry' development..... Investors interested in Cave Run to build resort

As many as eight developers have expressed interest in building a resort at Cave Run Lake, even though the area remains dry to alcohol sales, officials said.

The potential investors are not being identified at this time.

The site for potential development is located just across the dam on the Bath County side of the lake in the Daniel Boone National Forest.

A referendum for alcohol sales in the county was defeated 2-1 in 1994, and it is not expected to be voted wet anytime soon, according to Ray Bailey, judge executive.

But the absence of alcohol sales there doesn't necessarily mean a deal can't be struck to build a resort at the lake, according to Forest Service District Ranger Dave Manner.

Officials are cautiously optimistic that there will be at least one serious proposal to develop there.

In 1991, a study done by Morehead State University said a resort would be economically feasible with or without alcohol sales, although liquor sales would generate bigger profits.

The study said that in the resort's fifth year, investors could expect a 7.6 percent rate of return without liquor sales, but an 11.4 percent return with alcohol sales.

New state tourism tax incentives would allow investors to recover up to 25 percent of developmental costs over a 10-year period. That could amount to an extra 2.5 percent a year earnings for the developer.

When the forest service last sought developers in 1991, it heard from three potential investors, but got no serious proposals, Manner said.

A stronger economy, generous tax incentives, better roads and newer lines could help attract development.

Forest service officials hope those who are guessing interest are just as serious about developing.

The resort is proposed to be large enough for 150 rooms, a restaurant facility that would seat up to 350, a 100-boat marina and an 18-hole championship golf course.

Because the land is government-owned, developers can't purchase the site. But it can be leased for 30 years. Federal environmental analysis would also be performed.

Across the lake, Rowan County officials have expressed their eagerness to see a resort built.

A developer could be selected by spring or summer.

Pointers For Parents

Teaching Teens To Triumph

(NAPS)—One of the greatest gifts parents and grandparents can give teens is a chance to triumph.

By learning to triumph over the physical challenges found in teen-tailored wilderness expeditions, many teens are also learning to triumph over fear and self-doubt.

Many consider Outward Bound a worthwhile alternative to summer camp. Gift certificates are available. Call 1-888-882-6863 or visit www.outwardbound.com.

Rural Development director is honored

Under Secretary for USDA's Rural Development mission areas, Jill Long Thompson presented achievement awards to eight Rural Development state directors for their specific contributions to programs within Rural Development.

The directors received the awards while attending a meeting in Washington D.C. for the last time in 1998 as part of their quarterly report to the under secretary on state Rural Development programs.

"All of you have worked very hard this year and your efforts and dedication to Rural Development's mission to provide a better quality of life for rural residents is to be commended," said Thompson.

Thomas G. Fern, state director for Kentucky, received for Legislative and Public Affairs Award (L&PA5) recognition award and was recognized for the state's Outreach program. "The Kentucky state office has had a very successful year with its in-state publications and events and has been the recipient of countless news articles across the state," said Thompson.

Along with the specialized achievements awards, all Rural Development state directors received a certificate of appreciation for their year of service.

USDA administers a number of programs designed to strengthen rural economies and expand infrastructure, housing, education, health care and child development programs. Rural Development creates programs to enhance community stability while creating new jobs and new rural businesses. For details about specific programs, check out USDA Rural Development's web page.

Veteran info service to be offered Jan. 13

Veterans and their families will be provided information, assistance, and counseling in filing claims for state and federal benefits by Stanley Rosenberg, American Legion Post 22 Service Officer, on Wednesday, January 13th, 10 AM to 2 PM, at the Post 22 Home on Winchester Road, Mount Sterling.

A Service Officer from the Kentucky Department of Veterans affairs will also be available to provide information and counseling.

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA)' has announced that in 1999, it will enroll all veterans who apply for VA health care.

The new enrollment program, part of the Veterans Health Care Eligibility Reform Act, offers an expanded array of health care services, such as preventive care and outpatient services, in addition to eliminating many prior restrictions and conditions.

Enrollment will allow veterans to have access to the full range of services they need, not just those medical needs resulting from military service.

Veterans can enroll in the new program at American Legion Post 22, Winchester Road, Mount Sterling, Wednesday, January 13, 10 AM to 2 PM.

Veterans enrolling need to present Discharge records or Form DD 214.

Determination is key to keeping resolutions

It's a time of peace, reflection and beginnings. The dawn of a new year is the perfect time to begin — with New Year's resolutions.

Whether you resolve to loose weight, to spend more time with your family or to quit a bad habit, one thing is key motivation.

"Resolutions are food for taking a look back at the past year like a cabinet — can do wonders for state of mind and focus. Social support will also push you toward your goal — whether you have someone help you or you simply don't want to fail in front of friends.

Having a clear, visual image of a resolution's goal can be a big help in reaching the goal.

"At the beginning of the year, we've got all this energy, and we write the resolutions down in our brother, Boone Proctor Caudill Sr.

Surviving are two sisters, Lucille Caudill, Little of Lexington and Patricia Caudill Eubank of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.; one brother, Dr. Curtis Lee Caudill of Somerset; sister-in-law Jane E. Caudill of Morehead; 13 nieces and nephews and many grand nieces and nephews.
