My Mother

An ode to motherhood by Emma Mae Hatton
Written by Penny Robinson

Her face was like an angel her face was beauty itself. She was my precious mother who means more than silver or gold. She lays beneath a flower garden, if she only knew, that by now she is picked her colors.

It was the least I could do. Her wedding band is a token through many years she'd gave up all the love she had. But yet in a vision one night she came to me. The smile that was on her face she was happy as could be. I know she's with Jesus sitting on his throne. She is my precious mother who needs no one taught me wrong.
