Digestive Enzymes: A Key To Good Health

(NAPS)—Fair is fair. The better you treat your digestive tract, the better your digestive tract is likely to treat you.

As we age our bodies are unable to digest foods as well as when we were younger. As a result, our bodies may not derive maximum nutrition from our food.

Deficiencies of key vitamins, minerals and other nutrients can lead to increased risk for heart disease, arthritis and other age-related malaises.

But with key digestive enzymes, the body receives the extra help it needs to digest and assimilate nutrients in the diet. This results in more energy, less fatigue, and greater resistance to illness.

The most common sign of nutrient malabsorption is indigestion. In fact, estimates are that about 50 percent of people today suffer from chronic indigestion. Technically, this condition is known as dyspepsia. Its symptoms are not only personally uncomfortable, they may be embarrassing. A related complication of indigestion is irritable bowel reflux.

In view of the modern diet it's little wonder that almost everyone suffers from indigestion and related problems at one time or another.

Surprisingly, one of the best cures for indigestion isn't a drug at all. It's a highly concentrated combination of enzymes, first popularized by European doctors.

Powerful Digestive Aids Technically, an enzyme is a type of protein which acts as a catalyst to speed up the body or biochemical processes.

Enzymes enable the body to fully break down and utilize the nutrients in your food. They also insure that you eat what counts as you get older so much as what will help you utilize what you eat.

Patients tend to benefit most from a mixture of enzymes. They include the ones that help to digest complex carbohydrates, proteins, and vegetables; cellulose.

Enzymes also act like a natural caloric intake, such as certain grains produce, and certain grains produce noticeably more gas.

than eating other foods. All roughage in the diet produces flatulence to some extent. So while you need roughage, consume fiber, especially vegetables like broccoli, in modest amounts—and be sure to take your enzymes for extra digestive help.

Consumers desire more than ever to know about the potential dangers of commonly prescribed and over-the-counter, antacid and digestive drugs—plus safe alternatives.

Nicholas County Ministerial Association's Pastor's Pen

(NAPS)—By: Rev. Richard Gardner, Assemblies of God

Most of us believe in faith, but very few of us ever achieve the faith that brings us to where God really wants us to be in our spiritual life. I want to share with you a scripture in the Bible that I believe certainly carries the message that faith that many of us want but never achieve. We find it in the book of Hebrews in the 11th Chapter, verses 21-23.

And when he was about to die, he said, "I want to take each verse in it's context the way I perceive it through the Holy Spirit. I pray as I write that God will reveal the supernatural faith of this woman to you."

Matthew 12:21-28 "Then Jesus began to say, "I believe that the children of this age will not be delivered to you, but to the Father. For the Son of Man will be delivered to men, but he will not be delivered to death. For he will be delivered to the Gentiles, and he will be crucified."

Canan came out to the same cost, and cried out with the master's table. "I do not believe that I shall be delivered to the Gentiles, and he will be crucified."
