Summertime Homemakers

The Sunnyside Homemakers met on Monday, March 20, 2000 at the home of Lavina March, farmland in Carlisle. Five members answered roll call by naming a basketball team besides UCLH.

Today we had the lesson first, given by Lavina on "Centerpieces and Table Decorations". She showed us numerous things that could be used or made. In fact she had two large full of flowers, some were in vases, bottles, planters, bowls, baskets, and pieces of wood. Other arrangements also included canned fruit and even shells or marbles. Many items can be used to make from just things we already have in our home.

Then for our beautiful lunch setting, Cynthia had also made very cute favors for each one to go with an Easter theme, and very colorful. Louise Carbert

New program to help rural schools

Deputy Agriculture Secretary Richard Rominger announced a new USDA partnership to help rural school districts finance education and facility improvements.

The Rural Community Schools Rebuilding Program will provide rural schools with access to as much as $1.2 billion in financing to repair school buildings, acquire new equipment, develop course materials, and train teachers and other school personnel. Participating lenders can offer interest free loans in return for federal tax credits. USDA will guarantee up to 90 percent of the amount a school borrows from a private lender.

"Many rural communities face steep challenges in keeping their school facilities and programs competitive," said Rominger. "The funding provided by this new partnership will help rural schools improve educational opportunities for this new century."

The Schools Rebuilding Program will host workshops in rural communities to train community leaders in developing plans to obtain the financing. In its first year, the program will be implemented on a pilot basis in Mississippi, North Carolina, North Dakota, and Texas.

The program is a joint effort between USDA's Rural Housing Service and Organizations Concerned About Rural Education, a coalition of business and not-for-profit organizations. It includes the American Association of School Administrators, the American Association of State Colleges and Universi-

Prospective students, parents invited to Spring Spotlight Day at EKU

If you're considering college but have more questions than answers at this point, you're far from alone. But the best news of all is that there is still time to make those life-changing decisions about where and how to attend college, now you'll pay for it and what career path you would like to follow.

One place to get answers to some of your questions is Eastern Kentucky University's Spotlight Day, Saturday, April 15. All prospective students and their parents in Nicholas County have a special invitation to visit the Richmond campus for the annual spring event, which will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. in Alumni Coliseum.

Spotlight Day will include campus tours, academic exhibits and information, residence hall visits, admissions information, and refreshments. High School students and those transferring from a two-year school or one of EKU's three educational centers are encouraged to attend. Parking will be available in the Alumni Coliseum lot.

"Visitors will be able to talk with current students, faculty members and residence hall directors," said Stephen Byrn, director of EKU's Division of Admissions. "They can get a sense of what EKU can offer them. One of the advantages of EKU is that it is an institution that is transforming itself for the 21st century."

"Already about 20 Nicholas students are studying with us at EKU," Byrn said. "We're delighted that some of the county's best and brightest students have come to Eastern, where student success is the priority."

"The combination of innovative academic programs,
