Mrs. Cunningham's 2nd grade class studies about trees

The second grade class has been studying about trees, the life cycle, parts and seasonal changes.

They went to the 4-H Camp last week and took a walking tour on one of the trails with one of the . Kentucky forestman.

They saw native trees, trees changing into the Fall cycle and Kentucky wildlife in the trees. To end this project, the students had to collect ten leaves native to Kentucky and identify them.

The last of the project, the students cooked cookies called, "Tree Treats." All of the ingredients were from trees. The students have really enjoyed this unit.

'Oh say can you see...'

I can remember a jillion sporting moments growing up that are with me still today. The memories of little league championships and dropped fly balls. The shin-bone scars of sliding the wrong way and the pattern of a linebacker's cleats still imprinted into my waaaayyy retired knuckles. Jerseys that don't fit quite as handsomely as they once did and shoe boxes stuffed with pictures — some even from the ol' polaroid one-step! Lots of thoughts and rememberances to fill up the drawers and files of my mind.

But even all these play second fiddle to The Ultimate childhood athletic experience — that is still as powerful today as it was back then, and I get to enjoy it every four years.

When I was a kid, dragging in from ball practice or after untagnling myself from my football equipment, I can remember flopping on the floor to watch the Olympics. After scrubbing my ears and slipping into footie pyjames, I'd stare at the screen for "the good guys of the US" to take the stand. Back then, it was us against them — those mean ol' Russians! And any of you old enough to remeber the 1980 hockey battles waged by the US, understand the excitemnt and intesnity that I'm describing!

Now we didn't win every event, we probably won fewer than those mean ol' Ruskies. But when we did clim those steps, that was my favorite part. Well, almost my favorite part...

When one of the US athletes outdid those "Eastern Block giants" and got to stand a few feet higher than the silver and bronze finishers, that's when my all-time, best and favorite childhood sports memory began.

"Oh, say can you see...

Those first few words played while Old Glory was lifted above the pool or track or ice rink! It still gives me chills. Watching the National Anthem ceremony was a great Olympic moment — and it took place right in our living room!

With the Olympic Games taking the world's center stage evey four years, and with countless top American athletes taking part, I get to relive that memory quite often. And the feeling and emotion is still the same.

There's no superstar sports hero fighting with agents over million-dollar appearance fees. No striking officials and better yet, there's always the chance for an unknown to become a legend after just a few minutes of exposure! When was the last time that a pro football or baseball team, or college basketball team, won their league's championship without having months and months of headlines and sound bites?!

The 2000 Sydney Olympics wrapped up over the weekend, and I watched as many medal ceremonies as I could. Made me think back to Lake Placid (1980), Los Angeles (1984), Seoul (1988), Barcelona (1992), Atlanta (1996)...

Sports provide good life skills

Many people don't realize how sports, such as football, can contribute so much to the success of a young person.

Skills such as teamwork, determination, commitment and discipline can all be acquired on the football field. The skills will be used daily as we begin to grow into adults.

For the last 10 years, football has been an important part of my life. Each team I have been on has had its strengths and weaknesses. Each of these teams, however, had one thing in common: they were all able to bring a large group of people together to try and achieve a common goal.

During the years, I have learned how to tolerate bad attitudes, receive constructive criticism and motivate friends: team-working skills that are vital for success in today's world.

On the field, I have also learned the value of determination and commitment. The greatest motivation for these two things is the fact that football is a team sport. If you slack any at all, you are not only letting yourself down, but also all of your teammates. This pushes you to constantly give your best effort.

It is very important to earn the respect of your teammates as well as the fans and the people who support you in the community. You are setting an example for the younger students on and off the field. Your attitude you display and your reactions to wins and losses can provide some insight for young students who don't always get what they want out of life.

Also, over the years, I have learned to enjoy my time on the field. The fact that I enjoy playing is probably the greatest influence for me to play. I have fun while I'm on the field. I think this is one of the main reasons that our teams have been successful in the past couple of years. This entire team simply enjoys playing the game.

The regular season is over half way finished for this year's Jackets. The year has already been full of great memories. Whatever the outcome of the rest of the season, I believe that each and every senior can consider their football career a success, not only on the football field, but off of it.
