Alabama Civil Rights
Civil rights pioneers began marching the 64 miles through three counties, from Selma to Montgomery to secure the right to vote on March 25, 1965.

Animation divided
And the bridge that spanned it.

"I still remember the day I walked into the living room and saw my own cry. She said that Martin Luther King Jr. had been shot and killed. I wasn't sure who he was, but one look at Mom's face told me he must have been someone special. A few years ago, I got the chance to take my parents to see a special trail of civil rights history. With every stop I could, for the first time, touch and feel the events that shaped a divided country during a turbulent time. Moments such as the Birmingham Civil Rights Institute and the National Voting Rights Museum near the Edmund Pettus Bridge in Selma are showing the world how a state once divided can come together in a unified commitment to heal the wounds of the past."

What Goes Around, Comes Around - To Help Animals

USAPRS - Nearly $2 million has been raised to help animal shelters around the country, thanks to a program that's been around for the last seven years (49 years in dog time). The program recycles aluminum cans to raise money for the shelters and other non-profit and org. organizations. Called Pans to Paws, it's already brought in 6.6 million pounds of aluminum. So, this is a win-win program, benefiting both animal shelters and the environment. Wang Christ, manager of marketing communication for Alcoa's Regis Packaging division explained: "While recycling funds for shelters."
