was excellent and the colors they used were very bright and intense. These factors are the reason why Egyptian art is found in various forms throughout the world.

"It's pretty fun," said Matthew King, a sophomore who found his niche with the project. "Mine says 'hunt turkeys.'"

For example, he spelled "hunt" using first a house, which stands for the letter H. A bird comes next, which stands for the letter U. Next, he drew a mountain, which stands for the letter N. A finally, a rock, which stands for the letter T.

For turkey, he used a rock, a bird, an eye (I) a cup (K), a carpal and feathers (Y).

Lee Adkins, also a sophomore, drew an advertisement for "Hunt Turkeys." King used the slogan for the high school humanities class because he is an avid turkey hunter.

interesting picture using the four sons of the ancient Egyptian mythical deity Horus, to use as his art above the hieroglyphs to depict Nicholas County team sports.

"The idea kind of popped into my head," Adkins said. "I'm in band, but I like all of the activities. I thought it was a fun project."

"Things like this teach us about different cultures and how different language is among them," he added.

"I knew about hieroglyphics because I like Egyptian stuff. I have read about it and have seen a lot of programs about it on the Discovery Channel," Adkins said.

This project was a A-Bird) O-light K (cup).
