Talking turkey

So much for the diet.

Lthink the Easter Bunny saw his shadow on Columbus Day, which means there WILL be a Christmas turkey this year. We have so much turkey left over after last Thursday's nutritional extravaganza I'm going to sound like Bubba fron Forrest Gump' describing all the ways to eat the bacon... you can mash it u and put it in the ice crean maker for some turke sherbet... you can freeze drum stick and have drum stick and have a turkey-cicle..."

You get the idea.
I usually come out of my tryptophan-induced coma long enough for my next "dose" of turkey.
(Tryptophan is that stuff in turkey that makes you sleepy.)

turkey that makes you sleepy.] I swear, that stuff is better than NyQuil.

Have you ever noticed that the first meal you have with the leftovers is an exact recreation of the initial dinner, all the way down to the rolls?

he rolls?

But my favorite way to njoy leftovers (go with men this and don't make a ace) is to put a bunch o face) is to put a bunch of turkey on a plate and an couple of big dollops of Coo Why on the side for dipping You're making a face. In made the same face to the combination, so don't knock it until you've tried it. It was a moment worthy of a fleese's Cup commercial. "Heeey! There's turkey in my Coo! Whip! Heeey turkey! Rupp Arena: Not just a place to play

It's just a place where they play basketball...
Yeah, right!
Using that understatement to describe Rupp Arena is like saying Streisand can just carry a tune or that in recent seasons, the New York Yankees have had some postseason success.

It was quite a night and I must admit, the awe that I should have felt and appreciated way back then, definitely waved over me this tip my hat Adolph, Joe B. Eddie, Rick and Tubby. And that intensity and tradition. I hope the Cats win each game of every season until the end of time.

See you at the game
