They did not understand now to measure greatness so they had a concept that earned them this place of notoriety in the history of Christianity. In a book entitled "Ride The Wild Horses", Wallace Hamilton includes a sermon on the subject of "Drum Major Instincts" in which he says we all have it, the human desire to be important, to surpass others, to achieve distinction others, to achieve distinction and to be out in front leading the parade — the wish to be great. We express the instinct in all of life — and it is not wrong to have the instinct, which is God-given. What is wrong is to misdirect the ambition and to not channel it with the control of the co
