CAMPERS FROM FRONT

building and regulation-size fields for all types of daily recreation activities. "It's just a lot of fun," Zach Lemons, 6, of Nicholas County told The Carlisle Mercury during a break in the action Tuesday afternoon. "It's fun because you get to learn new things and you get to make stuff. It's like being at a big camp out with a lot of friends. I'll be back."

Lemons was making his first stay at the North Central 4-H Camp, but several campers were on return trips. Jessica Marcum and Christina Humphries, both of Carlisle, took turns telling their favorite parts about 4-H camp. "I keep coming back because it's so fun," Marcum said. "And you get to meet a lot of people from different parts of the state. They keep us real busy. It's hot, today, but we don't even care."

On this afternoon, the kids were gearing up for a dip in the pool and to take part in one of the week's more popular events - the water Olympics. Dark clouds and lightning kept the campers away from the water - but couldn't dampen the spirit and enthusiasm of the day. Staff members, kept things hopping in the shelter house with dances, games, songs and crowd interaction.

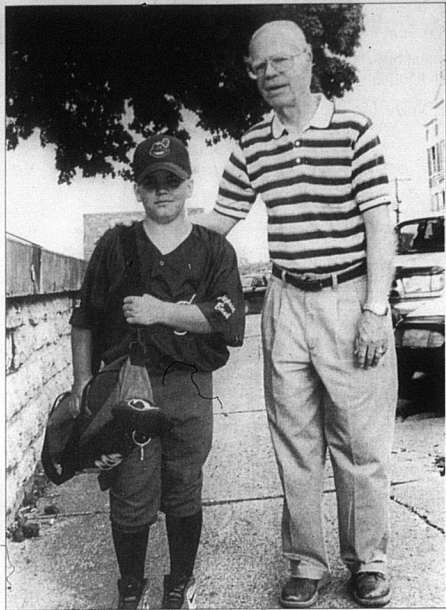

"One of the best benefits of kids coming to 4-H camp would be the opportunity they get to learn new skills they wouldn't have been able to learn at other summer programs or at home," camp manager Eric Conley said while a dozen or so marched this way and a gaggle of campers headed that way. "There's always something scheduled and going."

This week, Nicholas, Mason and Clark Counties sent campers to the Carlisle compound. And even with 300-plus (that's more than 1,200 arms and legs moving around), Conley and his staff keep the kids on a tight schedule. Three meals a day, plus two snacks, and things get going

Signing up for water Olympics is a big event for the campers at the North Central 4-H Camp in Carlisle. Staff members keep everything hopping with a jam-packed schedule with activities, classes and plenty of trips to the mess hall. early, about 6 a.m. By 10 p.m., most campers are sacked out from another day of fun (and learning) in the sun. With so many regularly planned activities, it's tough for the campers to pick their favorite. "The best part is 'Notly Under the Alley,' the soon-to-be Nicholas County seventh-grader said. "It's a dance we all do every night. Getting to
