Wilson crusade ends at First Baptist

World-renownedevangelist, Dr. Jim Wilson, and members of the Carlisle Baptist Church concluded a successful revival and crusade June 6.

"This is the best revival I've ever seen in Carlisle," one local lady, who is not a member of the church, said on the last evening of the Carlisle Crusade.

"I enjoyed everything. The music was good, the people were very welcoming and the evangelist was very good. He spoke in terms everyone understood. There was a good crowd every night."

Hundreds attended the crusade, enjoying fellowship, fine food and good music. Several who attended gave powerful testimonies of how their faith had been a great source of inspiration and healing during times of personal tragedy. Their testimony leant strength to Wilson's message and brought the church and community closer together.

"The church really pulled together for this revival," said First Baptist Church Deacon Tom Metcalfe, "I'm very proud of the teamwork in the community and I'm grateful to Dr. Wilson."

Wilson discussed his visit to the community with the Carlisle Mercury on the last night of the crusade.

"When you expect something good, it happens," he said. "It's been a thrill to work with the people here. People here are wonderful. The community is beautiful, the church is adorable, and the people are gracious and cordial. It does me good to come to places like this."

Wilson has been to many places around the world, traveling from his home in Orlando, Fla., and having only recently returned to the United States from crusades in Haiti and India.

"My God loves people of different religions and different colored skin," Wilson said of his overseas crusades, which often impact crowds in excess of 10,000.

"When I travel into other countries I'm usually asked if I represent the United States. I tell them that I love the United States, but I'm there to represent our Lord Jesus Christ."

Wilson said he observed spiritual similarities all over the world, including Carlisle.

"People have the same needs even if they are of a different culture. I try to bring a message of hope."

Wilson said he was saddened to learn of the deployment of the members of the Carlisle National Guard Unit.

"I pray every day for all of our soldiers and their families," he said. "They are my heroes and I'm very grateful to them all."

Wilson said he plans on traveling to Iraq in the future.

"I have a dear friend who is an Army Chaplain stationed in Mosul," he said. "If he can help get me the clearance I'll be going."

Wilson said he is also very interested in returning to Carlisle.

"I'd love it if the Lord brings me back to Carlisle," he said.

Wilson said he understood that attending a crusade at a specific church, or even attending any service in any church might intimidate some people.

"That's why I sometimes like having meetings in arenas or at football fields," he said.

Wilson discussed his preference on the books in the Bible, and said his favorite book in the Old Testament is Psalms.

"I try to read five Psalms and one Proverb every day," he said with a smile. "My favorite book in the New Testament is probably Romans. I love Paul and I love John, but I think my favorite is Romans simply because of the logic behind it."

Wilson said he has struggled with the public perception some have on evangelists.

"There were several incidents involving certain evangelists that occurred in the past that hurt evangelists in general," he said.

"I spoke to Dr. Billy Graham about it and he told me 'Jim, evangelist is a good New Testament word.' We continued talking about it and I decided all I can do is continue to be moral and financially responsible and proclaim the message of truth.

Wilson said an evangelist is a, messenger."

Wilson is a practitioner of humility, and a simple small wooden crucifix is what he wears around his neck.

He said he understands the difficulty people often face with keeping the faith in times of hardship and tragedy, but he also said there was a big difference between people doubting in faith and disbelieving in faith.

"Job doubted, Thomas doubted, even John the Baptist doubted," Wilson said. "Doubt can be refreshing, and it often leads you to the fountain of truth. When my baby boy died... I doubted, but I never got to the point where I was in disbelief. That's the difference between a Christian and a person who has no faith. We cry out and we often find God in the midst of our trials. The greatest lessons I've learned in life came not as I stood on the mountaintop but as I walked in the valley. Salvation is a free gift, and we should embrace it."

Wilson said he will be making a trip to Israel early in 2008 and invited Carlisle citizens to join him. It will be Wilson's eighth trip to the nation and Wilson told those in attendance the group would fly from Atlanta to Tel Aviv with no stops along the way.

Anyone interested in making the trip, assisting with a future crusade, or learning more about the First Baptist Church of Carlisle, is encouraged to contact Tom Metcalfe at 859-749-8003.
