ATV Safety Tips

As the popularity of all-terrain vehicles continues to grow at a staggering rate in the Bluegrass State, so do the number of deaths and serious injuries that come as a result of mishandling the powerful machines. Kentucky currently leads the nation in ATV fatalities with more than 100 deaths reported in the last two years, prompting lawmakers to call for tougher regulations for those who use ATVs. Among those regulations is the use of a helmet by anyone who operates or rides on an ATV, even on private property, and an age limit of 16 for all riders. While the Consumer Product Safety Commission notes the only way to eliminate death and injuries is to stay off ATVs completely, the answer is curbing the growing number of ATV-related injuries and deaths is through better training. According to the ATV Safety Institute, there are eight rules you should specifically follow to ensure your well-being when operating or riding on an ATV. Those are:
 • Always wear a helmet and other protective head gear like goggles.
 • Never ride on public roads as ATVs are not made for this type of pavement and other cars could hit you.
 • Never ride an ATV under the influence of drugs or alcohol.
 • Never carry a passenger on a single-rider vehicle.
 • Ride an ATV that's appropriate for your age (guidelines below).
 • Supervise riders younger than 16 - remember ATVs are not toys.
 • Ride only on designated trails and at a safe speed.
 • Take an ATV Rider Course by calling toll-free 800-887-2887 or by visiting www.atvsafety.com.
