In The Kitchen With Beth

I know, I know, it has not been more consistent but I will do my best to get you as often as possible. This week's recipe is one that I have had for a little while. It is a little try something outside of the norm. These are the ingredients you will need.

- 1 pork loin roast
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
1 tablespoon oregano
1/2 cup onion, sliced
1/2 cup green pepper, sliced
1/2 cup red pepper, sliced
1/2 cup chili powder
1/2 cup onion powder
1/2 cup onion powder
1/2 cup onion powder

Gardening with Charlie

Growing Plants in Problem Places

By Charlie Nardozzi (Family Features) When you read the descriptions of where to plant your new trees, shrubs or perennial flowers, invariably you see words such as "fertile, well-drained soil" and "full sun." In an ideal plant world, all soils would be rich in organic matter and well drained and the locations would be sunny and protected from wind. I don't know about you, but that doesn't describe my yard. I do have some flat locations, but those sites are exposed and windy. A protected spot in the backyard would be perfect for plants. But there's the north side of the garage that has great soil, but it's dark all day.
