SCAMMER

iting funds from area businesses for the proposed purchase of advertisement for a Bluejackets football calendar, with proceeds allegedly to be shared with the school.

"No one here has ever seen the guy or talked to him," Superintendent of Nicholas County Schools Greg Reid said earlier this month when news of the scam surfaced. "It's a shame."

At least 16 local businesses were successfully targeted, according to statements made by Nicholas County Deputy Sheriff Bennie Buckler earlier this month.

Good communication between law enforcement agencies led to Carter's arrest last week.

"We had a good physical description of the gentleman and the car he was in," Carlisle Chief of Police William Denton said. "We received a call from dispatch that a car matching the description was in town. The vehicle was stopped at the Assembly of God Church (near West End Park) and there were two individuals in the car. One of the individuals matched the description of the suspect. The men said they had been to the golf course, but they had no golf clubs or equipment."

Denton and Carlisle Police Officer Michael Riskaden conferred with Buckler, who had earlier opened a criminal case file when business owners complained about the recent scam.

Curtis Carter, brother to Ronald Carter and owner of the vehicle, gave his consent to search the vehicle to Chief Denton, according to investigators.

Personal items for several fundraising events from other areas, Denton said.

Denton also discovered that Carter was using several aliases and had four outstanding warrants from various Kentucky county sheriffs' offices.

Detective Graves spent over three hours questioning Carter during an interview session at the Carlisle Police Department.

Carter's outstanding warrants were from Jessamine County for the charges of theft by deception (two counts), which accogling to the arrest citation he failed to appear, alcohol intoxication, for which he failed to pay fines, and a failure to appear charge from Marion County where he was previously charged with speeding, 16 mph over the limit, failure to produce an insurance card and no operator's license.

Graves, Buckler, Denton and others, including the county attorney for Nicholas County, Dana Letcher, have worked together as the investigation into possible Nicholas County crimes continues.

"The key elements of the investigation will hinge on how he represented himself to merchants," Letcher said Friday. "All of the law enforcement agencies are working together and it's proving to be a very productive investigation."

Letcher and Buckler met Monday afternoon and discussed the progress of the investigation.

Buckler said he continues to gather statements, la County, Dana Letcher, which he will forward have worked together as the to Letcher for her consiinvestigation into possible deration in filing criminal Nicholas County crimes con- charges against Carter. tinues. According to Letcher and

Investigation continues

The death investigation continues in relation to an unidentified Hispanic man found in the Licking River last week.

Police say they believe they know the identity of the Hispanic male found floating in the Licking River Sept. 14, but have not released the name until conclusive DNA test results are complete.

"The cause of death is consistent with drowning," Kentucky State Police Detective James Bowling said last week. "We have no reason to believe foul play was involved at this time."

Fleming County Sheriff Scotty Royse and Deputies Johnny Catron and Bud Lyons joined the KSP detectives on the scene when two fishermen discovered the body.

Royse and Catron said last week that there is Hispanic male that has been missing in Fleming County and this may account for him.

"More conclusive DNA testing is being done," Royse said. "We have sent DNA samples to a special lab in Texas for assisting us with the identification," Bowling said.

Buckler, however, said the case is still open.

"We have had a lot of information come in, but we have not been able to confirm anything," Buckler said. "We are still working on it."

Q &A with Rep. Geoff Davis

The Carlisle Mercury asked Congressman Geoff Davis 10 questions regarding a wide spectrum of topics surrounding the current Iraq War.

Davis took time from his schedule to answer the questions in the wake of attending Staff Sgt. Delmar White's funeral in Lexington over the weekend.

The following are the 10 questions and Congressman Davis's responses in their entirety.

(Q.1.) What are your comments regarding the recent loss of life of two soldiers, Staff Sgt. Delmar White and Pfc. Sammie Phillips, in Iraq. Both were assigned to Battery B, 138 Field Artillery.

Rep. Davis: "As those who have served understand, freedom comes at a very high price in both peace and war. I am grateful that in each generation there have been men and women who have responded to the nation's call and have accepted risks to defend our land.

I express my deepest condolences to the families and friends of these soldiers who made the ultimate sacrifice in service to our nation. Our nation is indebted to citizens, like Delmar and Sammie, who responded the nation's call and volunteered to serve in its defense."

(Q.2.) What are your comments to the question 'Why did we go to war in Iraq?'

Rep. Davis: "When I came to Congress I inherited a war that was in its third year. Thus my decisions and actions are based on assuring our troops have what they need to do the job they were asked to do, and also to make decisions based on America's long-term national security interests. This should not be a partisan decision. It is an American issue that needs to be settled without the rancor and political manipulation many on both sides of the aisle have engaged in.

In 2002, the Congress authorized the use of force requested by the president based on the intelligence that had been gathered over the prior several years. The principle purpose in going to war was to disarm Iraq of its weapons of mass use nuclear, biological or chemical weapons of mass destruction. We now realize that there was a massive intelligence failure leading up to the war. The failure was not ours alone. Many other nations' intelligence agencies also believed Saddam had weapons of mass destruction. The constant debate about whether or not this was the right decision is futile. We have to deal with the situation in Iraq as it exists today so that we can ensure a safer tomorrow."

(Q. 3.) What is our mission in Iraq?

Rep Davis: "The current mission of our troops in Iraq is to provide security for Iraqis in key areas and also to train and stand up Iraq's own security forces.

Based on the achievements of our men and women in uniform over the last several months, General Petraeus has stated he will be redeploying many brigade combat teams starting later this year."

(Q. 4.) How do we define victory in Iraq?

Rep. Davis: "I want our troops to come home. However, we must listen to the recommendations of our military leaders on the ground so that we bring them home in a way that does not increase the risk to our country down the road.

We will have accomplished the mission of our current deployed forces by assisting the Iraqis in establishing a stable enough security environment to reduce the threat of Islamic radical terror, help enforce the rule of law, and allow the improvement of basic services."

(Q 5.) Do you believe there was a connection between Iraq and Al Qaeda in regard to the 9-1-1 attacks? What do you base this on?

Rep Davis: "Although Saddam Hussein maintained active relationships with many terrorist groups, it does not appear that there was any coordination between Iraqi's government and Al Qaeda."

(Q. 6.) What is your understanding of the difference between Sunni and Shiite Iraqis?

Rep Davis: "The Sunni and Shia are the two major Islamic groups in Iraq. The Shia are the clear majority of the population. However, while Saddam Hussein was in power he ruled through a network of Sunnis largely drawn from his own Sunni tribe, which is based near Tikrit.

The divisions in Iraq fall along two lines: ethnic and religious. The Sunni and Shia divide is based on very different perceptions about Islam. Conflict began as a dispute over the succession to Islamic leadership in regards to Muhammad's nephew who was murdered. This conflict goes back to the early days of the religion.

In Iraq, the conflict was further compounded by both real and perceived abuses of the majority Shia by the minority Sunni. The modern conflict among Sunni, Shia and Kurds is more rooted in the results of conflict from the days of Saddam than in their sectarian religious differences."

(Q. 7.) Will you be attending the funerals of White and Phillips?

Rep. Davis: "Yes, I attended the funeral of SSG Delmar White last week in Lexington. I do not yet have a complete itinerary for the services that will honor PFC Sammie Phillips."

(Q 8.) What is an acceptable loss of soldiers' lives to accomplish the mission in Iraq? Example would losing every soldier in Battery B be an acceptable loss in your opinion.

Both said a special aran ounce unit has been requested and will soon join the investigation.

The heat from the blaze continued to sweep across the ridge and mingled with the intense heat from the sun as the morning progressed.

"It was a bad year for hay anyway, with the drought," said Luke Myer's, one of the farm's owners, as he surveyed the damage Monday morning. "Now it's really going to be rough."

Hughes asks all Nicholas Countians to continue to exercise caution with flames during the dry period. He requests all motorists that smoke be sure to extinguish their cigarettes in their ashtray rather than tossing them out their window where dry grass along the side of the road would make excellent tinder to fuel a fire.

"We had 14 fires last month and we've already surpassed that number this month," Hughes said while expressing concern over the dry conditions.

Combs also expressed concern and urged all Nicholas Countians to call the state's arson phone line to report any act of arson.

Callers are urged to dial 1-800-27-ARSON with any information related to an act of arson.

Callers can receive a $1,000 reward for information they provide, which leads to the arrest and conviction of any arsonist.

Firefighters remained on the scene well into Monday afternoon.

"We'll keep a close eye on the ruins and prevent any flare ups," Hughes said.

bailer, front-end loader and hay wrapper, were destroyed by the blaze. The fire also destroyed a fertilizer buggy, belonging to Jabetown Mill, which was also in the 84-foot by 70-foot building that now sits in ruin.

Kentucky State Police Arson Investigator Curtis Combs arrived at approximately 10:55 Monday morning after being requested by Hughes.

Combs immediately surveyed the destruction and closely inspected the area around the fire with Hughes while firefighters Mike Smith, Matt Hughes, Doug French and Steve Minton, continued to contain the blaze and keep the inferno from spreading. Other firefighters who earlier assisted with battling the blaze included Mike Phillips, Mike Warner, Larry Sing, Jeremy Hughes, John Walker and Tony Fryman.

Cinders from the inferno fell like snowflakes as the firefighters went about their work in containing the blaze.

Hughes said he saw evidence of vehicle tracks near one end of the barn when he arrived and he said he saw evidence of the destruction that has led him to believe the area was where the fire originated.

Arson Investigator Combs praised the efforts of Hughes and his men.

"They always do an excellent job," he said. "I've enjoyed a great working relationship with Mr. Hughes."

Combs and Hughes said the investigation would continue through the week.
