DANIEL HURST. When Daniel Hurst needed prostate surgery in 2003, he chose Bourbon Community Hospital and was impressed by the care he received. So this past November, when Daniel started having pain in his abdomen and found out he needed prostatectomy surgery, his choice of hospital was perfectly clear. "The reason I came back to Bourbon Community Hospital was because of the way I was treated the first time," says Daniel. "I had been to the hospital in Lexington and in Harlan County, and I've never received care like that before. Starting with Dr. Charles Allan (left), a general surgeon with Bourbon Community Hospital, I was thrilled with the care of the outpatient surgery nurses and our staff."
