Historic cabin project progresses

By Charles Mattox

Some folks recycle aluminum cans.

Fleming County native Johnny Jett recycles historic log cabins.

Jett, who is also a respected artist, is currently involved in a cabin project near Dayton's Chapel in northern Nicholas County. He and Nicholas County brothers Tony and Cecil Bussell are painstakingly assembling ancient logs into a beautiful cabin for Coleman Callaway III, of Lexington.

"The logs came from several areas across northeastern Kentucky," Jett said last week as he examined progress on the cabin. "We've got some logs madder of ash, poplar, oak and some of our larger logs are hemlock."

Tony and Cecil, master carpenters in their own right with many years of combined experience, said this was the first cabin project they were involved in with historic logs. Both moved quickly and nimbly across the top of the structure as if they were walking on solid ground.

"These guys are great," Jett said of the brothers. "I was very lucky to get to work with them."

The project has been ongoing for several months.

"I was looking for the right place for about the last five years," Callaway, a direct descendant of Colonel Richard Callaway, who was an early companion of Daniel Boone, said. "This place is perfect and it's right on the main Licking River."

A beautiful dry stonk chimney graces the center of the cabin and Callaway praised the efforts of master stone mason Steve Holbrook of Lexington for the fine job. The stones enhance the majestic surroundings of the beautifully hewed and crafted logs.

Callaway said the choice to build in Nicholas County was an easy one.

"I love Nicholas County," he said. "Everyone I've met here is so friendly and helpful. I haven't had the first negative experience, and the landscape is beautiful."

Callaway praised the efforts of Jett and Tony and Cecil Bussell.

"Tony and Cecil have worked on some barns of mine and they are great carpenters," Callaway said. "Johnny is an artist in every sense and I have several of his paintings. He does outstanding work with log cabins."

Jett said the cabin might be done as early as next spring, with most of the chinking between the logs being done this winter.
