Art at Blue Licks

by Stefanie Gaither
Park Manager

Art is all around us and it plays an important role in our daily lives. It can amuse or entertain. It can be thought provoking. It can elicit strong emotions. It can be used to educate or document.

Art isn't just housed in museums. Art is everywhere. It can always be found at the park in many forms. Anyone that saw the scarecrow displays this month had to notice how the whimsical figures were used to educate. Scarecrows displayed important messages such as "stay in school" or "don't use drugs" in an entertaining and enlightening way. There was art at the park this weekend demonstrated in the creativity of campers through a site decorating competition. It took an artist to create airport signage and a life-size airplane in a realistic crash setting. An inventive camper craftily created a life size example of the "Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe" and received lots of attention from trick-or-treaters.

You will also find art hanging on the walls of the lodge through the monthly rotating quilt display or the amazing prints by local artist, Steve White. Park visitors always stop to view the photographs by James Archambeault and discuss whether or not they have ever visited the places captured on film. Herby Moore's detailed original painting is proudly displayed in the park lobby for all guests to admire.

Blue Licks Battlefield State Resort Park is a great place to admire art work, but it is also a great place to draw inspiration for artists. The park would like to assist Robertson County in re-establishing an arts guild in the community. If you are interested in taking an active role to promote arts in Robertson County, please call Stefanie Gaither at 800-443-7008.
