SOMETHING TO CRY ABOUT
Assessing the disciplinary practices of a watermelon thief

Heaven is A Lot Like Kentucky
By Charles Mattox

I've often thought about my father since his passing in August of 2001. He remains my role model and the standard by which I measure other men.

Men was an angel. Dad was the breadwinner, and the enforcer when it came to discipline. We had a small tobacco farm, and raised animals as well as a big garden.

I never realized, growing up, how lucky I was to have parents that cared for me. I didn't understand value when I was young. I measured wealth in material things, not understanding the truest essence of value.

I could get away with a lot more mischief with Mom than I could with Dad. As a last resort she would say, "If you don't settle down, I'm going to tell your father."

Athletic vandals strike park

Vanlandingham Park was vandalized last week and the athletic and muscular vandals remain at large. Carlisle Police Officer Michael Kiskaden continues to investigate an incident, which is thought to have occurred in the late evening hours of Feb. 10, or early morning hours of Feb. 11, which left the shelter house, at the park damaged and vandals lucky that they weren't electrocuted in the process.

circuit buck mounted on the side of the shelter house. The circuit buck carried high voltage live electrical current. Vandals also stacked picnic tables, destroyed a leaf trough and ripped metal trashcans from where they were mounted along the concrete floor of the shelter. Once ripped from the concrete floor, the encircling and athletic vandals placed one of the trashcans in the rafters of the shelter house. City sources say they believe the vandals consisted of at least three males, as the heavy picnic tables were precariously balanced, one atop the other and would have required considerable exertion to have placed them in such a manner and position. Anyone with any information regarding the vandalism is encouraged to contact the Carlisle Police Office at 289-3710.

something to cry about' he'd say matter-of-factly. I think he learned something of respect, belt karate in Japan and later, in Korea, while serving as a military policeman at the end of WWII and the beginning of the Korean War. He'd survived the Great Depression as a Kentucky farmer, he'd unbooked in the Guinness Book of World Records, but his name would have been at the top had such a category existed. He never punched me or kicked me. He never denied me food or shelter. Never made me do anything "excessively" dangerous around the farm. Dad was, in fact, a lot of fun most of the time. But he was all business when it came to discipline. Getting caught in a lie was about the worst mistake you could make. Running from him after getting caught in a lie was an adventure in pain I never tried. Crying didn't sway him. "Keep it up and I'll give you

ing a popular theme during a day of fun events. We had over 180 riders last year and a very large crowd that didn't ride. "Willoughby said. We had people that were physically and/or mentally challenged? Or do you have a caring heart and want to join a local organization, which has been helping such individuals and their families for the past four years? Then you are encouraged to become part of a growing organization of your neighbors and friends who are taking action to help special needs children and their families. The group is called Caring Hearts and their next meeting will be held March 1, at 2 p.m., at Garrett's Restaurant in downtown Carlisle. "We've had a lot of support from Nicholas County in the past and also a lot of support from neighboring counties," said Caring Hearts President Rick Willoughby when speaking of the non-profit organization. This will mark the group's fourth year with their sponsoring nine special needs children and their families to several events, which helped raise money and community support. One of the popular events has turned into the Family Fun Day, held each year at the Clay Windmill park with horse back riding be-

Regression Syndrome. Most had never had surgery. They will have to undergo even more in the future. "It's very rewarding when you can help a child and to see a smile on their face," said Caring Hearts member Gary Gilbert. Members banded together following an event two years ago called simply "Isaac's Ride," a horse ride benefit for Isaac Sexton, an 11-year-old boy with cerebral palsy. Isaac's grandfather is currently Caring Hearts President.
