Dog Gone Wild

Chapter 2

"When our family travels, Dad drives, Mom rides shotgun, and Chloe and I sit in the backseat playing games, singing songs, and even watching DVDs from time to time. I never know where we are, where we are going, and how long it will take to get there, so 'Are we there yet?' is my standard question. Usually, Dad answers, 'Not yet, Woody. It's going to be another hour or so, just sit tight.' This time, Dad surprised me. 'Woody, I thought you'd never ask. Your next challenge is to study the map and navigate our course,' Dad explained as Mom handed Chloe and me a map. There was one problem. How could I navigate when I didn't know what the word meant? Mom explained that navigate meant to direct, to guide, or to plot the course of the trip. Dad wanted Chloe and me to look at the map and direct him to our destination.

Destination? That was my second problem. Where were we going? "We're going to the Daniel Boone Campground," Dad informed, "Daniel Boone?" I looked at Chloe. She was studying the colorful map. It was this was a challenge, but I needed help. "Chloe, can you help me get started." "Sure Woody," First, turn the map around. It's upside down." No wonder I was confused! Ah, that was better! "Chloe, how about another clue?" "I'd love to help, Woody, but I'm confused, too." Chloe pulled out her compass. It showed we were traveling east. "The sun also tells us we are traveling east," Mom said. "The sun rises every morning in the east. If the sun comes up in the east, and we're driving into the sun, we must be traveling east." Moms are so smart!

"But how can I find east on the map?" I asked. Mom told me to look at the legend. First north, now legend. I sure wish I'd packed a dictionary. Seeing my confusion, Mom continued. "The legend is the chart on the map that explains the symbols." I found the chart. I saw N at the top, S at the bottom, E on the right side, and W on the left side. "E for east!" I said, as my paw traveled toward the right side of the paper. "But where?" As I was asking my questions, Chloe said, "Look! I found Daniel Boone Campground!" I asked Chloe to show me. She pointed to the right corner of the map. "Woody, do you see the green trees and the little green symbol that looks like a tent?" I squinted at the tiny drawing and saw what looked like woods. In little letters, I saw the words Daniel Boone Campground. "I see it too! And look, we're close. Slow down, Dad! We're only about three inches away!"

Everyone laughed! It was clear I knew nothing about maps so I swallowed my pride and asked for help. "Dad, I know navigating is a challenge between Chloe and me, but just this once, can Chloe and I work together?" I was expecting Dad to tell me to keep trying, so I was surprised when he said, "Great idea, Woody. A rule about maps is to work together to accomplish a task. So yes, this time, instead of competing with Chloe, the two of you can work together." "Wow! I thought you were going to tell me not to give up!" Dad explained I wasn't giving up; I was just changing my game plan.

With the help of the legend, Chloe and I discovered that the large, colored lines were major highways, the broken lines were little roads, the little blue lines were rivers, and the numbers were the highway numbers.

"Woody," Chloe said, "Why don't you look out the window to see if you see any road signs that will give us clues as to what highway we are on?" "Sure!" I said. "Hey! I just saw a sign that looked like a reindeer walking across the road. How silly! A reindeer should know this is a bad place to cross the road!" Dad explained the sign wasn't for deer, but so drivers would know to slow down because deer are in the area. "Ah! That makes sense!" Right after the deer sign, I saw U.S. HWY 80. "Chloe, we are on United States Highway 80!" The moment I said "80," Chloe said, "I found it! I found it!" We now knew where we were, where we were going and following the colored line we now knew how to get there. But wait, this tiny little road looked like it could be a shortcut.

Braving the weather

Despite Saturday's rainfall, some families got out to enjoy what they called of "Saturday in Carlisle." Shown above, Tyler Kiskaden, age 6, gets ready for his turn in the Noah's Ark bounce, brought to the event by the Presbyterian Church of Carlisle.

There is an amazing amount of talent "hidden" among us. "Saturday in Carlisle" provided the opportunity to shine a light on some of our most gifted artists.

The judging of the art show at the Corner Studio of the Courthouse Square Arts Guild took place this past Saturday and drew a large crowd enough to make it difficult to navigate around the room and see all the wonderful photographs, sketches, paintings, and even a knife collection.

The photographs I have included are poor representations of the quality of the artwork - even if they had been in color. There is no good way to reproduce the quality and color of the art in the newspaper; we can give you a general idea of what was available, but you really need to see them in person to appreciate their beauty.

If you have not seen the displays at the Corner Studio (corner of Broadway and Main Street) you are doing yourself a great injustice. Winners at this year's art show were:

- Winners
1. "Dog Show" by Kathy Johnson - $75 prize
2. "Lauren" by Larry Frost - $50 prize
3. "David Thornsburg - Hunting Knife #1"

- Honorable Mention
1. Photo - "Almost to the Top" - Jamie Courtney
2. "Meet Me at the Stone Barrow" - Cate Waggoner

Most Promising Student
"Journey" - Hanna Mills

Note: Hanna's work was the only time all three judges decided unanimously. All others were split decisions.

The Guild would like to thank Deposit Bank and Duck Letton Insurance for sponsoring the show and providing the prizes and awards.
