

Jackets post Homecoming win

After dropping back-to-back games, losing to Model and Berea, Nicholas County worked its way back into the win column on Saturday evening on its home gym floor in front of an excited fan base.

Senior leadership played a key role in lifting Nicholas County over Paris. Charles Washington poured in a game-high 28 points and Kyle Campbell contributed 17 as the Jackets defeated 10th Region counterpart Paris 75-56.

Steadily pulling away from Paris in the non-district game, Nicholas County outscored the visiting team in each of the first three quarters. Nicholas County improved to 11-8 and Paris slipped to 5-15 following the non-district game. The Jackets, playing their second game in the month of February, eased out of a low-scoring first quarter ahead 9-5. Both teams were able to score more frequently in the second quarter. Nicholas County, remaining out in front, managed to stretch its lead to near double digits in the second stanza. The Jackets settled for a 34-25 lead at the intermission.

Host Nicholas County was able to blow the game open in the second half, outscoring Paris 25-11. Leading 59-36 at the start of the fourth quarter, Nicholas County executed well over the course of the final eight minutes as the rotation was diverse with the game's outcome essentially decided.

Each team featured nine different scorers. Senior forward Dalton Hampton scored nine points and Harry Fegan, a senior guard, added eight for the Jackets. Zach Lemons and Charby Pope pushed in four points apiece while Kalep Brierly and Zack Howard added two apiece for Nicholas County in the win. Cody Fryman rounded out the Nicholas County scoring effort, knocking down a single free throw attempt.

Senior forward Cody Maggard and sophomore guard Oscar Alamilla led Paris offensively, pushing 10 points apiece. Davion Meyers scored nine points while Bentley Enlow and Austin Brooks added six apiece for the Greyhounds.

Nicholas County is looking to gain some momentum heading into the 38th District Tournament later in the month.

Letcher was exposed to cutting-edge technology and up-to-date techniques to facilitate successful DUI (alcohol and drug) prosecutions. Much of the course focused on the devastating effects of DUI crashes, the lives lost and those left behind to suffer through the tragedy. Letcher is determined to continue to protect our citizens from the scourge of alcohol/drug abuse by prosecuting to the fullest extent.

Dope found, students arrested

School staff members and police worked together Friday to remove drugs from Nicholas County High School.

Approximately one and one half ounces of marijuana and approximately one pill were removed with four juveniles and one 18-year-old male student being arrested in two separate instances.

"We're not going to tolerate drugs in our school," said Nicholas County High School Principal Marty Feltner, following Friday's investigation at the school, which left four juveniles and one 18-year-old student with drug charges when marijuana was found in a classroom and in a student's backpack.

One juvenile was charged in relation to a pill being found in an unrelated incident, according to police and school sources.

According to all involved, it was a cohesive effort with fluid communication between school staff, and administration as well as outstanding investigator work done by School Resource Officer Ron Allison and Carlisle Police Sgt. Darrell Layne and his K9 unit.

The investigation began when a teacher detected the odor of marijuana, according to Feltner and Allison.

Both said the odor came from the "Ag class."

According to Feltner, the Ag teacher notified him and he immediately contacted Allison.

Allison quickly arrived in the room and assessed the situation and could also detect

Kelley holds book signing

Staff Report

Nicholas County native G. Gayle Kelley was at the Nicholas County Library Monday night signing copies of his book "My Brain Gets Full."

Kelley met with over two-dozen readers at the library and spoke about the book and the process of writing it.

"It's one of the best turnouts for an author we've ever had," said head librarian Becky Reid.

"I think it went excellent," said librarian Susan Short, who was also on hand. "We were really pleased with the turnout. The Kelleys are very well known in the community."

The detailed and inspiring masterpiece of literature that Kelley produced was eight years in the making and came about as a result of a serious accident and fall at his workplace in 2002, during which he suffered a traumatic brain injury.

Following the accident most of Kelley's memory was gone and he became a stranger trapped inside his own body searching for his own identity and trying to reconnect with family members that were now strangers. He had no recollection of his life or his fam-

Heaven Is A Lot Like Kentucky

"Simon Kenton ran the gauntlet in all 13 times. Both arms had been broken and a gash with a tomahawk had laid bare his skull," Mason Arrowsmith, son of Kenton's frontier companion, Samuel Arrowsmith, recorded in volume 10 BB of the Draper Manuscripts.

"Kenton's Station was located on Lawrence Creek, about a mile below the two main forks of the creek." Christopher Wood, Draper Manuscripts volume 8 BB. Christopher Wood was the 12-year-old son of Reverend William Wood, who arrived at Limestone Point in Dec. 1784. Christopher Wood helped put the roof on Kenton's cabin, the first roofed cabin in Mason County. Within the first few months of 1785 there were 18 occupied cabins surrounding Kenton's cabin with stockades between each cabin to form a rectangular fort or station. Two-story blockhouses were placed on each corner and the new fort took the name of Simon Kenton's Station.

Heaven Is A Lot Like Kentucky

Fox purchased land from Kenton and founded the town of Washington, near Kenton's Station in 1785.

"Josiah Records built the second cabin in the town of Washington... His oldest son Spencer was a small man but very active and energetic. He had a round face, black eyes, fair skin, black hair, his height about four feet ten inches. Laban (Spencer's brother) was five feet nine inches tall, light complexion, blue eyes, very active on foot. These two were often associated with Lewis Whetsal (Wetzal), the great Indian killer," William Hughey volume 10 BB Draper Manuscripts.

"Sometimes we had to stand sentry all night at different parts of town for fear the Indians would fall on us in the night. Thus we lived in Washington for two years and four months," Captain Spencer Records, Draper Manuscripts volume 23 CC.

He played the scenes over and over in his head while small snowflakes continued to fall on the otherwise cool but sunny afternoon.

He remembered how three years earlier he had been standing by the river, tethering the Kenton Family flat boat to the roots of a large sycamore tree that jutted out from the shore of the Ohio River near Limestone Point (Maysville).

He remembered how he had gasped as she stepped from within the confines of the little roofed structure that was situated at one end of the cumbersome, yet durable flatboat.

She was so beautiful that to gaze upon her exquisite face was simply put, breathtaking.

And he stood there with his mouth open, his mind a blank as she looked directly into his eyes and smiled.

And his heart melted as he heard her soft giggle as she sprang from the center of the flatboat to the side of the boat's log rail in one splendid, graceful leap. A second leap brought her onto the shore of the Ohio River where she looked directly at him again and laughed as she sprinted away with her mother, who stared at the large man, giving him a scornful and prolonged gaze before she too set off up the river bank.

Simon Kenton fell in love from the moment he first met 14-year-old Martha Dowden.

And strong emotions stirred in his heart from that day forward.

Martha's mother wouldn't hear of marriage until her daughter was 17-years-old.

Known among the small group as the widow Dowden, she was a sister to Simon's brother, John's, wife,

Simon was 32-years-old and old enough to be the girl's father. And though Simon had never been married, he did have a son only one year younger than Martha; Simon Ruth Kenton, the son of Mary McGee Calvin

Simon stood six feet and three inches tall and was among the strongest and craftiest frontiersman along the Kentucky frontier

Since establishing his station he spent countless hours in helping form a strong defensive network of spies and scouts, which he led by example.

Simon was so skilled that even Colonel Daniel Boone owed his life to him.

His reputation among the Native American Tribes was legendary for having survived long weeks of captivity in 1779 when he had had been physically punished again and again by Shawnee tribal members before escaping.

Worry though she might on the long nights that she knew Simon would be gone on his duties as a militia captain, Martha could not resist when Simon had asked for her hand in marriage.

Even with the wedding being prepared Simon was helping to negotiate a peace treaty with the Shawnee warrior who had taken him captive in 79, a war chief named Wey-a-pier-sen-wah or Blue Jacket, as the Kentuckians called him.

It was Blue Jacket who gave him the scar on his head, where he'd knocked the frontiersman unconscious with his tomahawk pipe during one of the gauntlet runs when Simon had tried to escape.

He still couldn't believe that he had survived all those physical challenges and ordeals of his captivity.

But for now, as he stood in his best 'Sunday-go-to-meeting' outfit he felt no concerns for the future or the past, but was simply enjoying the moment as he watched Martha Dowden walking toward him in her wedding dress. Simon and Martha were deeply in love.

Rev. William Wood stood nearby and soon Simon and Martha were pronounced 'man and wife'.

And though the year 1787 was one of the most peaceful along the frontier it would shine in stark contrast to the years immediately following when Simon and Martha lost many of their dearest friends.

But those are other tales we will examine if the Good Lord is willing in future columns

But this a good place to end this week's column; With Simon and Martha Kenton walking down the aisle amid the shouts and smiles and heartfelt merriment of their dear friends and neighbors during the Valentine's season of 1787.

My two Cents

Love

Language is a wonderful thing. One of my favorite expressions is, "Words can be art." And indeed, there is an easy comparison between a writer's vocabulary and an artist's paints; words can create a mental image as vivid as any artist's depiction.

There are times, however—particularly around Valentine's Day—when we are more prone to struggle with words and their meanings. Take the word "Love," for example. When we say, "I love..." something, what do we really mean?

Imagine the following situation: A young couple has just spent an ideal day together. Their chemistry is so perfect; their thoughts, their moods, their very souls are so in tune with each other that the words tumble forth of their own accord: "I love you!"

A few minutes later, the couple is walking hand-in-hand when the young woman suggests getting a bite to eat. The young man gets a wistful look in his eye and agrees: "I'd love a slice of pizza right about now."

While they're standing in line waiting to order, he bumps into a buddy he hasn't seen for a long time. They chat for a while, but eventually smack each other on the shoulder and say good-bye. He turns to his girlfriend and says, "Man, I love that guy. He's the greatest."

Eventually, the couple becomes so comfortable in their relationship, they no longer say "Bye" when

My Two Cents

By Steve Scalf

they're done talking on the phone. Now all their calls end with "Love ya!"

So which is it? When he tells her that he loves her, what does he really mean? That he's hungry and could use another slice of pizza? Or is he just done talking and trying to say good-bye? Is he expressing deep, heartfelt passion, or telling her that she's a great pal.

For couples who have been together for a long time, "Love" takes on a whole new meaning. One afternoon, I came into a room where Cindy was sitting and sensed that something wasn't right. It was just a feeling in the room, as if there were an invisible storm cloud hanging in the air around me.

My first thought was, "Uh-oh. What did I do this time?" I couldn't think of anything on my own, so I tried to start a conversation to see if Cindy would give me any hints: "Hey, honey," I asked, "How'd your day go?"

She hardly looked up from her book, just gave me a little "Hmm," finally adding, "You know, exercise a little, do a little laundry, read a book..." and immediately resumed reading.

A little while later, Cindy put the book down and just sat there with her eyes closed. "Everything OK?" I asked her.

"I'm just resting my eyes for a minute."

Cindy and I know each other so well, I normally have no trouble reading her moods; but that day, I felt totally out of synch. I was at a complete loss.

After a few more minutes of silence, I surrendered. Not knowing what else to do, I placed a gentle hand on her shoulder and said the only thing left to say, "You know I love you, honey..."

She didn't even look up: "Hmm."

The next day, things were back to normal. We had just finished having a good chat about how each of our days had gone when I decided to ask her about it. "Really?" she said with a puzzled look on her face, "I must have been really out of it because I honestly don't remember any of that."

These days, when Cindy and I look at each other and say, "I love you," it can mean a lot of things. Sometimes it means, "Thanks! Dinner really hit the spot!" and other times it's like giving a best friend a playful punch in the shoulder and saying, "You're the best!"? Sometimes it means, "Talk to you later," and other times I'm trying to say, "I'm sorry for whatever I did that was probably all my fault, anyway." And sometimes I'm saying that even after all these years, you still make my heart go pitter-pat.

And sometimes it's all those things at the same time, all wrapped into one.

Anyway, Happy Valentine's Day, Cindy. I love you.

For all that it means.

And that's my two cents, Stephen Scalf

Bread of Life

Psalm 119:105 Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.

As long as you live by the word of God, you never have to be in the dark again. You never have to remain in confusion about which path to take. You never have to grope blindly along, struggling to find your own way.

Isn't that great? Isn't it exciting to know that the word of God will give you all the light you need every day of your life if you allow it to?

Build your faith in that word and renew your commitment to it as you make this confession today:

"Father, in the name of Jesus, I commit myself to walk in your word. I recognize that your word is integrity itself - steadfast, sure, eternal - and I trust my life to its provisions. You have sent forth your word into my heart. I let it dwell in me richly in all wisdom. It does not depart out of my mouth; I meditate on it day and night so that I may diligently act on it.

"Your word is incorruptible seed abiding in my spirit, and it's growing mightily in me now, producing Your nature, Your life. I thank you, Father, that Your word is my counsel, my shield, my buckler, and my powerful weapon in battle. It is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path. It makes my way straight before me. I never stumble or fall, for my steps are ordered by your word.

"I recognize the strategies and deceits of Satan and I put a stop to them by speaking your word out of my mouth in faith. I am confident, Father, that You are at work in me, both to will and to do your good pleasure. I exalt your word; I hold it in high esteem and give it first place in my life. I boldly and confidently say that my heart is fixed and established on the solid foundation - the living word of God, Amen."

OPINION

The Crazy Horse Lady

Another week where the weather has not gotten much better BUT SPRING IS JUST AROUND THE CORNER! I know what you are thinking "yeah right". Oh well, it doesn't hurt to be optimistic!

I did get in a few hours of working with my new horse, Dia, on conformation! I didn't know that something that looked so easy was actually going to be kind of hard to get it all working together! Yes, it did make me feel better, sort of. ☺ I've decided to do something really new for me this year and that is showing my Rocky Mountain! So, needless to say, I've got plenty to learn, work on, and not all the time I wish I had available to me. I'm sure, just like you all!

With the weather being so cold, nasty and unpredictable, now is a great time to look over your tack to see if there are any repairs that need to be made. You might even realize that you may need to replace some of that old tack that you have been fixing every year. There are a lot of great deals out there if you just pay attention and know what your needs are in advance. So, when you're depressed and itching to get out there and be with your horse but the weather isn't really cooperating, take the time NOW and get your tack sorted, organized and ready for the RIDING SEASON ahead!

Speaking of Riding Season just being around the corner, there is a 2010 Kentucky Trail Summit event sponsored by the Kentucky Horse Council & KEEP, Saturday, February 13th and Sunday, February 14th at Blue Lick State Park. Sign up today by contacting Virginia Grulke at (859) 367 - 0509 or you can email her at director@kentuckyhorse.org or www.kentuckyhorse.org. It will be two (2) days filled with fun and lots of information! Check it out!!

For all of you out there that have that special someone, remember Valentine's Day is February 14th. Don't forget to include your favorite equine partners. I guarantee you the reward of listening to them devour their special treat will make up for any disappointments you may be feeling that day!

I know this is early, but I'd also like to mention this year's Equine Affaire is April 8 - 11th at the Ohio Expo Center. This is truly an awesome experience that I look forward to every year. A "must go" for anyone who owns a horse! It is a time filled with clinics, seminars, demonstrations, a fabulous trade show, breed, horse, farm exhibits and new for 2010 is a trail riding pavilion.

Something you don't want to miss is the Pfizer Fantasia that will be playing at 8 pm Friday and Saturday night at the Equine Affaire. I guarantee you will not be disappointed or bored! It is a musical celebration of the horse that will feature professional equestrian performers and horses choreographed to a wide variety of musical styles. It consists of a diversity of horse breeds from miniatures to drafts. The excitement of equestrian sports such as reining, dressage, driving, drill teams and more will be included.

Chat with you next week. God Bless You, Your Family and YOUR EQUINE FRIENDS and I pray you all have a safe, blessed and Happy Valentine's week!

Crazy Horse Lady

Thought for the Week:

Another person is not responsible for making you happy, it is our own individual responsibility to find what makes us happy, be happy and pass it on!

ily and the book acts as a catalyst in helping Kelley ferret out the facts of who he was and who he is. His wife Donna assisted Gayle with his writing success and provided a stabilizing support network for him during the healing process, which continues.

Kelley gives generously of his time, and his unique perspective and experiences are utilized by his efforts of working with members of the Brain Injury Alliance of Kentucky and Cardinal Hill Hospital.

Kelley makes a positive impact on everyone he meets.

"I think Mr. Kelley is one of the most giving gentlemen I have ever met," said one of the book's cover designers Joshua Harper.

Harper and Kelley's grandson Jon Kelley, also both Nicholas Countians, collaborated on creating the book cover.

Kelley not only wrote the book for his own self help, but also as a self-help guide for others who have suffered similar injuries and their family members who assist them.

The book is also an eye-opening revelation regarding the intricacies of health care in regard to worker's compensation claims.

Kelley dedicated the book to "Those who take care of me" and "Those who love me".

Local attorney Eric Tedder acted as Kelley's content legal advisor and Mike and Marsha Haney teamed up for photographs of the author.

The book was published on Jan. 26 of this year and is quickly becoming a favorite around Nicholas County, throughout Kentucky and across America.

Kelley's doctor, Robert Granacher, Jr. M. D., P.S.C., MBA, won a National Medical Award for the success and recovery of Gayle Kelley.

"My Brain Gets Full" is available through the Amazon Company, one of the world's leading online book companies.

Be sure and order your copy today or stop in at the Nicholas County Library to check out a copy or to purchase extra copies that are on hand at the library. The book is many things to many people but is deeply enjoyed by all who read it.

hit on a student's backpack. Both areas contained marijuana."

Allison estimated a total of one and one half ounces of marijuana was found.

Feltner said the incident did interrupt the academic day to a certain degree but classes resumed shortly afterward and remained on schedule throughout the rest of the school day.

Feltner and Allison expressed gratitude to Sgt. Layne and Hancock for assisting in the incident.

"I believe it would have taken much longer to have found the marijuana without the K9 unit and it would have been more disruptive to the school day," Allison said.

Carlisle Police Officer Benny Buckler also assisted with the investigation and Allison praised his efforts as well as Carlisle Police Chief William Denton who provided the city officers to assist in the school investigation.

Feltner said there were no injuries and no request for any medical assistance associated with the incident.

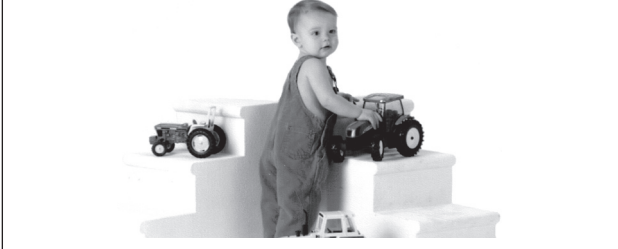

Allison said the investigation remains ongoing and urges anyone with any information related to illegal substances being in the school to contact the Mr. Feltner or himself at the high school.

Both Allison and Feltner said they believe this to be an isolated incident with there being no similar instances this year.

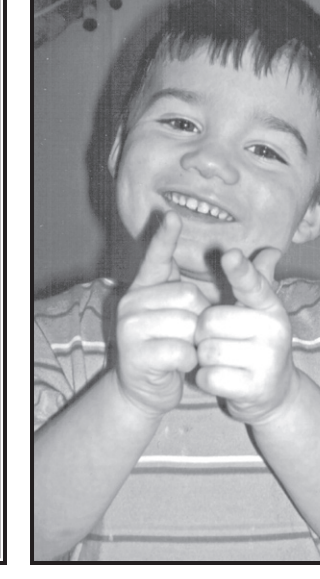

Both expressed the strongest desire to make the school "as safe as possible for students and staff."

Blue Jacket Basketball

Jackets drop road game to Berea

BEREA — Visiting Nicholas County secured an early lead but couldn't remain out in front of non-district foe Berea last Tuesday (Feb. 2). Berea overcame a slow start and after trailing at the conclusion of each of the first three quarters, defeated Nicholas County 55-48. The Jackets dropped to 10-7 after suffering the setback. Saving its best for last in the non-district game, Berea doubled up Nicholas County 18-9 in the fourth quarter. Berea was able to enact some revenge against the Jackets in the early-February matchup. The Jackets and Pirates met for the second time in less than a week. Nicholas County defeated Berea 57-41 on Jan. 26 in a game played as part of the Bluegrass Conference Tournament at Paris. Sophomore guard Ben Miller paced Berea offensively against the Jackets, scoring a game-high 17 points. Two teammates joined Miller in double figures for the Berea boys' basketball team. Luke Ambrose added 15 points and Nathan Vaughn netted 12 for Berea, which improved to 6-12. Nicholas County played with plenty of intensity in the opening quarter. The Jackets led Berea 18-11 through the first period and showed several signs of being able to top stretch their lead to double digits in the eight minutes that preceded half-time. Berea, however, wouldn't go away. The Pirates owned a 12-9 scoring edge in the second quarter as Nicholas County was left to lead 27-25 at half-time. Both teams netted a dozen points in the third quarter as Nicholas County carried a slim 39-37 advantage into the final quarter. Nicholas County was limited on the offensive end in the final quarter as Berea scored a single-quarter high 18 points while only allowing nine. Senior forward Dalton Hampton paced Nicholas County with a team-high 16 points. Charles Washington, a junior forward, followed with 14 points as two different Nicholas County scorers netted double figures. Zach Lemons scored eight points while Cody Fryman contributed four and Camron Dale dumped in three for the Jackets. Harry Fegan tossed in two points and J.D. Wagoner scored on a free throw for Nicholas County in the setback.

Slow start leads to loss for Jackets

Visiting Sayre carried a 10-point lead out of the opening quarter and stretched its lead over the Nicholas County Jackets in the second period Monday night. Host Nicholas County outscored Sayre in the second half but couldn't overcome the slow start. Sayre defeated the Jackets 77-65 in the non-district matchup. Longtime hardwood rivals, Nicholas County and Sayre hooked up for the first time this season. Freshman guard Mike Smith led Sayre to the win over Nicholas County, scoring a game-high 28 points. Eighth grade center/forward Dakari Johnson scored 16 points and sophomore guard Reid Freeman added 14 for the Spartans. Junior guard Griffin Miller chipped in eight points for Sayre (14-7) in the victory. Sayre opened the game on a tear, outscoring Nicholas County 21-11 in the opening quarter. The Spartans capitalized on the solid start and remained out in front in the second quarter, outscoring Nicholas County 14-11 en route to a 35-22 lead at the break. Nicholas County heated up in the second half and excelled offensively before falling short. Sayre led 55-43 through three quarters. Senior guard Kyle Campbell led Nicholas County in scoring with a game-high 21 points. Senior forward Dalton Hampton had 13 points and junior forward Charles Washington added 11 for the Jackets. Nicholas County turned in a balanced scoring effort as senior guard Harry Fegan netted nine points and senior center Zach Lemons dumped in six. Kalep Brierly and JD Wagoner rounded out the Nicholas County scoring with three and two points, respectively. The Jackets dropped to 11-9 following the loss to Sayre. The Jackets are due back in action on Friday (Feb. 12) at home against Bourbon County. Nicholas County is slated to face Oldham County in the APrewitt Classic at Henry Clay on Saturday (Feb. 13) before visiting Burgin on Feb. 19 for a regular-season finale.

Thoughts from the Pastor's Study By Rev. Donald Riggs

Psalms 117: 1-2
 1-O Praise the Lord, all ye nations: praise him, all ye people.
 2- For his merciful kindness is great toward us: and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Praise ye the Lord.
 (We all need to praise the Lord for men that has given us the good report of the Lord, Will we receive it and live?)

Isaiah 53: 1, and 4-7, Who hath believed our report? And to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?
 And this is Isaiah's report. Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities:

the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth; he is brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth.

 The question is will we the church believe this report?
Luke 4:18-19, (Jesus said) The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he (my Father) hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor: he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised. To preach the acceptable year of the Lord. (also found in Isaiah 61-3)

 Who will believe the words of the Lord Jesus?
I Peter 2:21-25, For even hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps: (here is what we are to follow) Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him (God) that judgeth righteously: who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed. For ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls.
 (Are we this church that Paul wrote about in, II Timothy 3:5,) having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away.

John 14:6- Jesus said, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.
John 17:17- Jesus said, Sanctify them through the truth: thy word is truth.
 (when we are born again we become a living Spirit, living in a fleshly body, but one day we will be living in a heavenly body, not of man, but of God) Are we ready for that day to come. Jesus said, marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again. That which born of the flesh is flesh; and that is which is born of the Spirit is spirit. He said, Verily, Verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. Jon 3:1-7. Isaiah 55:6, he wrote, Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him he is near: (I say unto you He is near now, call upon Him now! He loves you and me.)

MERCURY TRIANGLE HEADQUARTERS~SALTWELL~BARTERVILLE

compiled by
Phyllis Brady

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lee Feedback's grandchildren, Alex and Gabby, Louisville spent weekend before last with them.

Phyllis Brady was among several women who attended a Avon open house at the home of Sue and Vernon Adams, Paris, on Thursday night put on by JaDawna Adams Cameron.

Mr. and Mrs. David Earlywine celebrated their 57th wedding anniversary on Sunday. It was that day Feb 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doyle and Phyllis Brady were among a large crowd attending a Bridal Shower on Saturday for Travis Fryman and Samantha Gaunce, held at the beautiful new home of Mark and Julie Ritchie Doyle in Lakeview Subdivision near Cynthiana. Travis is the son of Eddie and Julie Doyle Fryman. Samantha is daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Darryl Gaunce.

The Ellisville Homemakers met on Thursday under the library, in the Adult Education Center where we use a nice big room and kitchen. We had 13 members and county agent Kim Adams Leger.

Phyllis Brady gave the Devotional. She read the scripture about being a time for everything and read and commented on a couple of other things and asked Patsy Smoot to pray. We then had pledge to the flag. Faye Buzzard gave us a copy of the minutes. Debbie Workman gave treasurer's report. Several Thank you cards were sent around. In old business it was stated we gave 9 gift cards to the needy or shut ins and also gifts etc. to others for Christmas and to Caring Hearts. That is not a stipulation or incentive or purpose of the Homemakers but God blesses when you care and share. After discussion of new and old business we had a nice meal with Phyllis Alexander being hostess and also potluck. She had chili and decorations and Faye Buzzard had soup also. Phyllis Brady asked the Blessing. A very nice door prize was won by Pasty Smoot, also Phyllis gave everyone a candle. The lesson was given by Martha Ray Ritchie on "Osteoprosis" Last months lesson on Controlling Spending was given out. Some gave Valentines today. Phyllis Brady had a game at end of meeting about Presidents and John Snapp and Norm Ritchie won prizes. We have about 4 men members. Next meeting will be March 4.

Outreach services delivers for free any regular print or large print books, books on CD, and magazines to homes, schools, day cares, and care facilities. Also anyone who is ill, vision or hearing impaired, disabled, or lacks transportation may receive materials selected by the staff or requested by patrons.

If you are a resident of Nicholas County and would benefit from this service, let us put you on our schedule. Please call the Nicholas County Public Library at 859-289-5595. Susan Short is our Bookmobile Librarian and would be happy to talk to you.

Preliminary statistics* indicate that six people died in five separate crashes on Kentucky roadways from Monday, January 25 through Sunday, January 31, 2010.

All of the crashes involved motor vehicles and three of those victims were not wearing seat belts. Single-fatality crashes occurred in Bell, Daviess, Jefferson and Pendleton counties.

One double-fatality crash occurred in McCracken county and this crash involved the suspected use of alcohol.

Through January 31, preliminary statistics* indicate that 55 people have lost their lives on Kentucky roadways during 2010. This is 2 less fatalities than reported for the same time period in 2009. There were 49 motor vehicle fatalities and 29 of those victims were not wearing seat belts. Six pedestrians have been killed. Six crashes involved a commercial motor vehicle. A total of 12 fatalities have resulted from crashes involving the suspected use of alcohol.

Citizens can contribute to highway safety by reporting erratic drivers to the Kentucky State Police toll-free at 1-800-222-5555. Callers will remain anonymous and should give a description of the vehicle, location, direction of travel and license number if possible.

These statistics are still preliminary as KSP waits for all local law enforcement agencies throughout the state to report any crashes and fatalities that may have occurred in their areas. Crash data for this report is generated from the Kentucky Fatality Analysis Reporting System (FARS).*

Additional Facilities: Company may furnish the required facilities at an additional charge based upon the application of the monthly rate set forth in the Excess Facilities Rider applied to the current cost of the facilities as periodically updated.

Economic outlook for Eastern Kentucky

by John James Snidow Institute for Rural Journalism and Community Issues

The consequences for human welfare involved in questions of economic development are simply staggering: Once one starts to think about them, it becomes hard to think about anything else... —Robert Lucas, Nobel Prize-winning economist

In keeping with the economist's sentiment, Gov. Steve Beshear and state Economic Development Secretary Larry Hayes recently went to Japan and China to attract foreign investment to Kentucky.

But many in the state remain unconvinced that foreign investment is the key to prosperity in Kentucky, arguing that locally spurred growth represents the most promising path forward. Whether it focuses on recruiting foreign factories or lifting communities up by their small-business bootstraps, the growth strategy chosen for Kentucky has special meaning here in the eastern counties. What would Eastern Kentucky be like if it had a booming economy rather than a stagnating one? What improvements would it see in literacy? Environmental conservation? Health? In such a historically poor region of the country, the answers to such questions quickly become hard not to think about.

For a long time in Kentucky, there have been two major schools of thought about economic development: Those who think recruiting large-scale, out-of-state industry is the key, and those who favor strategies focused on small businesses and entrepreneurs. Recently, though, both sides have expressed desire to reach a middle ground, directing state effort and money at bringing in new industry, but also incubating smaller companies that are already in the state.

The first and older school has long pointed to the Toyota plant in Georgetown, which spawned dozens of supplier plants and made Kentucky a leading automaking state.

"Since the Georgetown project was successful, people can now always say 'Well, we got Toyota,' and pretty soon, that's the only game in town," says Justin Maxson of the Berea-based Mountain Association for Economic Development, a leader of the second and newer school.

The problem with this type of focus on industrial recruiting, Maxson and others say, is that it favors those areas of Kentucky with flat land to the near-exclusion of Appalachia.

"Let's face it, we aren't ever getting a Toyota plant in Owsley County, Kentucky," says Peter Hille, director of the Brushy Fork Institute at Berea College, which trains community developers. "What we need is not a 'silver bullet' like a Toyota plant, but instead a bunch of silver BBs."

For years, state economic-development officials in both Democratic and Republican administrations largely ignored the complaints of MACED and its allies. But under Beshear, the state seems more sympathetic and is doing more to help and recruit small businesses.

"There is a new small business tax credit for exactly this purpose," notes Business Development Commissioner Jim Navolio. "For every new employee you add, you get an additional $5,000 tax credit."

Navolio has worked in the Economic Development Cabinet off and on for about 30 years, and is a creature of the old school. But he sees value in the new. "Those guys at MACED are smart guys," Navolio says, "and successful local development efforts are those that don't sit around and wait for Frankfort to give them deals. We want to promote that kind of growth."

But does this career recruiter of heavy industry really believe the strategy will work? "Every governor since Isaac Shelby has probably campaigned on a platform centered around small business," he half-jokes, referring to Kentucky's first governor and the political appeal of such a platform. But he says Beshear and his administration are serious about shifting at least some of their economic-de-development focus. Beshear says that should help Appalachian Kentucky. "There are tax credits now that really should encourage and help those in Eastern Kentucky who want to stay and develop their own businesses," he said in an interview.

The governor acknowledged that the region's low education rates—and the high number of adults who are disabled or otherwise not in the workforce—are real obstacles to attracting investment that produces jobs. But he said that doesn't disqualify the region from state help.

"Eastern Kentucky's circumstances do make it more difficult, but we have to continue to weigh the pluses and the minuses like we do for any region of the state," Beshear said, adding that his administration is "in the process of identifying funding that we can use to hire a person to work with me and the economic development cabinet to market Eastern Kentucky's strengths to attract more business to Eastern Kentucky."

Kentucky Highlands Investment Corp., a venture-capital firm that started as a War on Poverty organization, and makes loans to businesses interested in providing jobs in 22 southeastern Kentucky counties from its office in London, is happy to see a broadening of focus.

"I'm not opposed to recruiting big businesses. I think it's fantastic," says Jerry Rickett, president of Kentucky Highlands, which brought a large chicken-processing plant to Clinton County as part of the federal empowerment zone program.

"But if I were the economic development commissioner, I would really focus on getting the 5,000 micro-businesses [those with fewer than five employees] in the state to hire just one more person," Rickett says. "That's quite a lot of jobs when you think about it."

In counties farther east, where coal remains a major industry, Beshear says "Coal is the centerpiece" of the state's economic-development strategy. He adds, "We also want to move in the areas of renewable energy."

State lawmakers share this focus on new and developing energy industries as Eastern Kentucky's way forward, with the help of researchers at the University of Kentucky.

"The vision was to have Kentucky as the place to go to for all of your energy research," says House Floor Leader Rocky Adkins of Sandy Hook. "UK is doing some of the most advanced fossil-fuel and biomass research in the world."

Asked why high-tech companies would locate in a mountainous, comparatively undereducated part of the state, Adkins replies, "Because that's where these minerals are. Instead of putting minerals on a barge, let's put these facilities in Eastern Kentucky and create jobs. Ashland's success shows the power of locating processing facilities near the resources."

The coal industry and its allies are counting on development of "clean coal" technology, which can reduce or eliminate emissions of greenhouse gases and pollutants. But the technology for capturing and storing carbon dioxide has not been proven on a commercial scale, and even if it was to be, not all see value in it.

"Clean coal is a joke," UK historian and Appalachian scholar Ron Eller says, "and it has never shown any signs of working." Eller says state spending on alternative carbon technologies is siphoning valuable funds away from more productive uses.

"The governor just allocated 24 million dollars for clean coal research at the University of Kentucky," Eller notes. "Imagine the impact of spending that

Nicholas man found dead investigation continues

By Charles Mattox

charles@thecarlislemercury.com

An investigation continues into the death of a Nicholas county man who was found unresponsive Saturday Morning in Carlisle.

Police say they were called to 323 Walnut Street, where they found Ricky Peters, 30, unresponsive.

Peters was later pronounced dead.

Carlisle Police Officer Mark Snedegar continues to lead the death investigation.

According to Officer Snedegar and Carlisle Chief of Police William Denton, Thomas "T-Bone" Watkins also occupied the house.

Police say they saw no visible signs of foul play.

An autopsy was scheduled for Peters over the weekend but police say forensic scientists with the Kentucky Medical Examiner's Office have not released the cause of death at this point.

"Our death investigation remains open," Chief Denton said.

Carlisle's newest police officer Guy Turner is assisting Officer Snedegar with the death investigation.

$24 million on entrepreneurship. It's really a cruel, cruel irony, when you think about it. Clean coal is certainly not the silver bullet."

A reporter's observations

Four months ago, this series set out to shine light on Eastern Kentucky's economic problems and efforts being made to solve them. We have interviewed coal-industry experts, academics, legislators, a former governor, a sitting governor, a lieutenant governor, educators, economists, financiers, bureaucrats of all stripes, teacher-union bosses and the occasional community organizer.

We have tried to highlight the widespread and often bitter disagreement over the role of Frankfort, the role of tourism and the role of coal in Kentucky's future—but so too have we tried to point out areas of mutual interest and common ground.

In that vein, it should be here noted that in four months of interviews, not a single person failed to tell this reporter how much Kentucky's economic future depends on better schools and better schooling. Indeed, if the leaders of this state are to be believed, education is the form of economic development that Kentucky needs most.

As University of Louisville economist Paul Coomes puts it, "Saying you need to invest in education is like saying you need to eat food. You can get away with not doing it for a little while, but eventually, you'll die."

John James Snidow, a graduate of Paul Blazer High School in Ashland and Harvard College, with a degree in economics, was a summer researcher for the Institute for Rural Journalism and Community Issues, based at the University of Kentucky. Reach him at Snidow@gmail.com. This concludes a series of articles about economic development in Appalachian Kentucky, distributed by the Institute. Great Blue Heron population appears stable

News Editor
charles@thecarlislemercury.com

Great Blue Herons, also known as (Ardea herodias) have fascinated bird watchers along the Licking River watershed for hundreds of years and their population appears stable according to local Fish and Wildlife officers.

The large, yet graceful birds continue to inspire awe in everyone who studies them.

Like a throwback from the dinosaur age when pterodactyls would glide through the air, the Great Blue Heron has a peculiar appearance and in flight, the slow flapping of the wings, coupled with the enormous wing span will also attract attention. But though it is one of Kentucky's largest birds, its stealthy movements are often overlooked while it is in the water searching for aquatic prey.

The Great Blue Heron is a large wading bird in the heron family, common near the shores of open water and in wetlands and streams over most of North America.

Great Blue Herons are very common sights along the streams of northeastern Kentucky.

When foraging, they stand silently along riverbanks, lakeshores, or in wet meadows, waiting for prey to come by.

They are expert fishers and snare their aquatic prey by walking slowly, or standing still for long periods of time and waiting for fish to come within range of their long necks and blade-like bills. The long neck acts as a catapult, slinging the sharpened blade downward and dealing a deathblow with a quick thrust of the sharp bill. The prey is then swallowed whole.

Great Blue Herons often bite off more than they can chew, literally, and have been known to choke to death by attempting to swallow fish too large for their long, yet narrow necks.

Mice and other small rodents also make up part of their diet. They also eat insects and other small creatures.

Although they hunt predominantly by day, they may also be active at night. They most often hunt and forage alone yet they nest in colonies.

Great Blue Herons prefer tall trees for their nests, but sometimes nest in low shrubs. Females produce two to seven eggs, which both parents protect and incubate. Chicks can survive on their own by about two months of age, according to The National Geographic.

Males typically choose shoreline areas for foraging, and females and juveniles forage in more upland areas.

"They seem to have a very stable population along the Licking River," said Captain Herbert Booth. "I like to watch them take off in flight."

Captain Booth has been a Kentucky Fish and Wildlife officer for 35 years and has an intimate knowledge of the Licking River and its watershed streams.

Booth said the birds sometimes cause problems with small outdoor ponds owners or aquatic farmers, who have experienced some success with raising Kentucky shrimp.

Great Blue Herons' size (they can almost grow to five feet in height) and wide wingspan (between five and one half to six and one half feet) make them a joy to see in flight. They can fly between 20 to 30 miles an hour.

Kentucky has an abundance of wildlife and a wide variety of native birds, of which the Great Blue Heron is a noted member.

Rotary Clubs sponsors speech contest

By Stephen Scalf
Staff Writer
steve@thecarlislemercury.com

Attention all high school - aged students: Could you use an extra $800?

The Rotary Club of Carlisle is proud to announce the 2010 High School Speech Contest.

The competition is open to any high school student (freshman through senior), including public, private, and home-school students.

To enter, students must complete an application form, which are available from high school English teachers or from the Rotary Club.

The topic for this year's speech is the Rotary 2010 motto: "Service Above Self."

Students are expected to research the topic, but may consult with parents, teachers, or others about their speech.

The speech must be five to eight minutes in length (penalty points charged for going under or over the allotted time), and must give the speech without the use of notes in front of the Rotary Club.

The local competition will be held at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, Mar. 25, 2010 at the Neal Welcome Center in Carlisle, with cash prizes awarded for first second and third place.

The winner of the local competition advances to the Regional Contest, expected to be held at Blue Licks Battlefield State Resort Park some time in April (date to be announced). The winner of the Regional contest receives a cash prize of $200 and advances on to the District contest, to be held in Florence on Saturday, May 15, 2010. First place receives $500, second place $250, and third place $150.

Speeches will be judged on a 100 point scale:

- 1-30 points for Delivery
- 1-35 points for Originality
- 1-35 points for Content

5 points will be deducted from a contestant's score for each minute or fraction thereof for a speech less than 5 minutes or more than 8 minutes.

For complete fairness, contestants will be assigned numbers, and will not give their names or schools until after all speeches are completed, at which time all contants will be invited to introduce themselves to the judges and share what they have gained from the experience of preparing and giving their speeches.

Participants may bring up to, but no more than two adult guests (parent, grandparent, or other guardian) to the speech contest. All guests should be aware that no one will be allowed to enter or leave the room during a speech. Additionally, no applause is allowed during or after a speech as it may influence scoring. All applause should wait until after all have spoken and as the contestants have the opportunity to introduce themselves.

For additional information, contact the Rotary Club of Carlisle Speech Chairperson, Cindy Scalf at 859-289-3005

She shoots, she scores

Megan Bretz, 7th grader, launches a jump shot against Fleming County Monday night as senior Megan Hunter positions for a rebound. The Lady Jackets played extremely intense during the first half of play but turnovers and a tenacious Lady Panther team resulted in a 65-49 victory for Fleming. Bretz did an outstanding job on defense and offense for the Lady Jackets and played with the same intensity as her much older rivals.
